problem wherever raspberries are grown, may be effectively controlled by rigid inspection of plantings for diseased stock and the ruthless destruction of all diseased plants, says the plant disease specialist at the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station, here who has been making a special study of raspberry diseases. The use of disease-free planting stock is the only way in which the disease can be kept out of new plantings, he says, and the only way to secure such stock is through inspection and the complete destruction of its diseased plants. In this way the disease has been stamped out and reinfestation prevented in several experimental plantings.

"Fruiting plantations of red and purple raspberries containing more than 20 per cent mosaic are not worth the expense of roguing," says the station specialist. "Plantings less than three years old and containing less than 10 to 15 per cent mosaic may be made reasonably free from mosaic by roguing out diseased plants. Roguing all bushes affected by the disease, as well as the healthy adjacent bushes from a young planting containing less than 10 per cent mosaic will insure a safe source of planting stock."

"Cayuga red raspberry plants that had been transplanted from a planting which showed 25 per cent mosaic upon roguing in 1922 had 48 diseased plants out of a total of 2,286, or 2.1 per cent. On the other hand, plants which had stood adjacent to the diseased plants in 1922 showed 759 diseased plants out of 2,472, or 30.7 per cent. Transplants of several varieties of red raspberries which were rogued for the first time in 1922, showed, in 1923, out of a total of 5,975 plants only 15 diseased, or 0.25 per cent. At the same time in 29 varieties growing in a single block it was necessary to remove 25 per cent of the plants because of mosaic in 1922. The adjacent plants were not removed, and the next year in 34 varieties growing in the block 15 were found to be free from mosaic, while 16 per cent of the plants from the other varieties had the disease. These results show that the disease can be effectively controlled only when the apparently healthy plants adjacent to the diseased plants are also rogued. Healthy plants become infected with mosaic when aphids from diseased plants next to them carry over the disease. The entire plant is affected and is unfit for propagation and a menace to all healthy plants nearby."

"Four points are essential to the effective control of mosaic in New York plantings. First, all of the diseased plants must be recognized, and this requires more or less experience as it is not always easy to tell when a plant has mosaic. Second, two rogues are necessary, one in June and another in August. Third, the diseased bushes and all the roots must be dug and carried out of the planting carefully and destroyed. Fourth, all of the bushes standing next to diseased bushes are also diseased. Only in this way can clean plantings be maintained and reliable planting stock obtained."

THEVES ARE NOT KEPT AWAY BY STEEL DOORS

NORTH TOWNANDIA, Feb. 22.—Burglars Thursday night visited the waiting room at the North Towner hotel at Martinsville for the eighth time in the past five years. ## ADDITION BUS HELPS CAR GET OUT OF SNOWDRIFT

ADDITION, Feb. 22.—The Addition bus, running between Addition and Corning had quite an exciting experience Thursday evening, both going and coming from Corning through the drift. When about to reach Cowles Hill, the enclosed car of Philip Kinsella of Painted Post, which was descending Cowles Hill, turned out to avoid too close contact with the bus, and became lodged in the snow drift.

With the assistance of shovels from the Addition bus, they finally succeeded in getting the car in the road again. All the country roads are so drifted with snow, that it is almost impossible to get through with cars, and the sleighs have a great deal of trouble yesterday afternoon and evening.

HURT RECEIVED 18 YEARS AGO PROVES FATAL TO MAN

BINGHAMTON, Feb. 22.—An injury received 18 years ago when he first landed on the shore of America, caused the death of Alexander P. Metrakos, 33, proprietor of the California Press and Company and the Palace of Sweets in the Binghamton Theater building.

This young man came to this country from Greece. It was shortly after his arrival that he fell down a flight of stairs and cut a gash in his forehead. It healed and nothing more was thought of it, for it never bothered him until about three weeks ago.

MAKES PLEA
FOR PRAYEREvangelist Declares all Should Give at Least an Hour

"We are the children of God," said "Jeff" Lowman in a powerful sermon on "The Young Peoples' Greatest Trouble," at the Baptist Church last evening. "And it is up to us to carry on the work that others can see the light of Christ."

He said to do this, we, the children of God, try to live the life of Christ as nearly as we can, he exhorted.

"Kind words spoken at the right time often mean a great deal in helping carry out the work of God. It costs something to follow Christ and the question asked is, how much are you willing to pay? If the people of today would devote an hour each week to prayer each day it not only would help them but would help others."

LAYERS Taylor, was presented with a New Testament by Mr. Taylor last evening for reciting over 75 verses of scripture, an honor record.

The choruses, led by Homer Sands of this city, sang "Ride on the Clouds," The quartet, composed of new members of the church, rendered a very nice selection.

As usual the crowd was so large that many were turned away. Extra chairs were placed in the aisles and in the back and sides of the auditorium.

Although Mr. Lowman's campaign is to end tomorrow, "words of people who have heard his sermons are endeavoring to have the service continue next week."

Unusual programs are planned for this evening and tomorrow.

SNOW DRIFTS
STOP BUSESRoad Between Bath and Savona Blocked; Start Work of Removal Today

Due to heavy snow drifts between this city and Bath, the automobiles which run between these places have been unable to make the trip during the past two days. To try to remove the drifts and until a late hour this afternoon, the buses have been unable to get through.

The road is open through to Campbell and it is possible for automobiles to reach Savona with some difficulty. The biggest drifts are between Savona and Bath especially along the stretch near the Bath Hospital farm.

The work of removing the snow on the Bath route which was to have been started yesterday was delayed because the large truck which had been donated by the town of Erwin and Corning got caught in a snow drift just west of Painted Post yesterday afternoon. A second apparatus which had been prepared for this work got stuck in a drift below East Corning, and a third truck is being prepared this afternoon. It is planned to work all day Sunday on the Bath road in an effort to open the route for the buses on Monday.

HAS D'ANDREO
JUMPED BAIL?Jury Trial Granted When He Fails to Appear in Court Today

Local police officials are of the opinion that Peter D'Andreo, of this town, has "jumped" his bail of $250 which had been furnished by his mother following his arrest on a charge of robbing a telephone booth in the telephone booth at the Lackawanna station and the trial which was scheduled for this morning was adjourned for two weeks because of his absence.

When the case was called this morning D'Andreo's attorney announced that his client was "far away from the city" and asked for an adjournment. City Attorney Morris who appeared in court on the case would not consent to this and moved that the bail be forfeited. The attorney for the defendant then resorted to legal maneuvers and demanded a jury trial which automatically adjourned the case until tomorrow.

Judge Wheeler stated in court this morning that he believed it was apparent that the young man had jumped his bail and he announced that he was reluctant to grant an adjournment without the consent of the prosecuting attorney.

D'Andreo, who has been in court on several occasions of late, was arrested during the night of December charged with being implicated in the theft of the coin box from the telephone booth at the Lackawanna station. Another Christmas had just occurred so the time was called to his part in the deal but D'Andreo pleaded guilty and his trial has been adjourned from time to time. Recently he was arrested for being implicated in a series of robberies but this case was dropped when Joseph Babio, the principal witness against him, had made an admission confession to the police, escaped from the city and D'Andreo was also charged with an attempt at jail breaking in the grand jury in this action. A bail of $100 has been put up for the youth on this charge.
