for what you have made than for what you have been, the Palestine of the future may well be the monument of his genius, and history may single out his promise of a national home for the Jews as his one great act of constructive citizenship.

A sense of proportion in contemporary events is very hard to achieve, and English people who have not quite realized how big this project is of restoring Palestine as a center of Jewish nationalism.

Certainly no event of our time has commanded so grand and extensive a retrospect into the great past of history.

Cyrus, the most attractive of Eastern empire-builders, was the first of the Gentile Zionists.

Alexander so admired Jewish ability that he colonized the city that still bears his name with Jews, so that in the ancient world it became to Jerusalem what New York is to London.

Julius Caesar was another great friend of the Jews, and the Eastern policy of the Roman Foreign Office was perpetually pro-Jewish, at least down to the destruction of Jerusalem.

Napoleon was the first of the modern Zionists, for the foundation of a Jewish nation with Jerusalem as its capital was part of his youthful Eastern scheme.

There must be a magnificent contagion in an idea that has captured minds so great and so dissimilar, and modern England has reason to be proud to have this great heirloom of the past in her keeping.

But Lord Balfour's visit to Palestine had learning as its inspiration rather than politics, and it is only the accident of Arab opposition and a few acts of Arab lawlessness that have distracted attention from the University which he went to open to the political aspects of Zionism. These are numerous and important. You can discuss the policy of a Jewish Palestine as a contribution to the problem of peace in the East. It has close relations with certain strategic aspects of British policy in the East, and in particular with the security of the Suez Canal, now, when Egypt has been promised independence, of deeper concern than ever to this country. Zionism again, as the first political idea that has been entrusted by the League of Nations, has a profound interest for the student of international equity that Geneva hopes to develop for the world. But it is its cultural side that has always interested Lord Balfour most in Zionism.

Politics are, after all, only the practical side of human life. The Jews are one of our great races in history, and the only race that history has deprived of nationality.

This unique wrong has brought its penalties to the rest of the world as well as to the Jews. Probably in no race is the average level of ability quite so high as in the Jewish race, but if the Jew's contributions to the idea of the world have not been quite proportionate to his abilities, the reason is to be found mainly in the denial of nationality.

When the Jews were a struggling and usually oppressed race in the mountains of Judaea, divided with the Greeks the product of human thought and aspiration, and were as clearly superior in morals and religion as the Greeks in art.

Despite their great cleverness and their deep universal respect for the things of the mind, they have done nothing like it since. There is no race in which it is truer to say that the Jew is parasitic, and it is their consciousness of the fact that has made so many Jewish Zionists in art as in politics he has seemed to be experimenting in civilization and in the future of his own, and despite great successes he has often been a coarsening and a disorienting force.

To the extent to which that is true, it is the punishment of the world for the great wrong that history has done to the race, and tardily and timidly being repaired.

The new University of Jerusalem may be the beginning of a new Renaissance of the East. But it may have an even greater value to the world than the University of the East. The Jewish genius, given a national home, and equipped for the first time for nearly two thousand years with a nerve-center of its own, may give the world a force, comparable to its past.

The Writer

But here is the finger of God, a flash of the will that can, existent behind all laws, that made them and lo! they are! And I know not if, save in this, such gift be allowed to man. These men and lo! they are! And I know not if, save in this, such gift be allowed to man.

Consider it well; each tone of our life is everywhere in the world—loud, soft, and all is said: Give it its due, and use it with two in my thought.

And, there! You have heard and seen! Consider well! How could I have made them and lo! they are!

School Meeting Again

Last year's school election in Corning City District No. 3, was a spirited affair.

It brought out a large vote, turned up some absurd issues, and reflected little credit upon an enlightened community either for the issues involved or the manner in which certain features of the election were conducted.

Last year voters turned away after passing through the voting and campaigning, determined never again to be humiliated or involved in a school election.

Next Wednesday afternoon the annual election occurs again.

That appears to be about all many of the issues of last year but there will undoubtedly be brought forward a new set of issues that the school building be as the polling place.

Many taxpayers are undoubtedly in favor of removing the Board of Education headquarters from downtown to either the old or new academy building on the ground of convenience and expense. The issue will be "Why should we be taxed for downtown office when there is plenty of room on the hill?"

This issue the school board will have to meet. It should be handled adequately and fairly presented for both sides and not be allowed to "go over the top" permit the minority itself to degenerate into taking it "out" on the candidates, whoever they may be, for there will be only two places filled, not enough to control the board, and the candidates whoever they may be will be able, public-spirited, and who should be permitted to stand on their own merits.

But Lord Balfour's visit to Palestine had learning as its inspiration rather than politics, and it is only the accident of Arab opposition and a few acts of Arab lawlessness that have distracted attention from the University which he went to open to the political aspects of Zionism. These are numerous and important. You can discuss the policy of a Jewish Palestine as a contribution to the problem of peace in the East. Politics are, after all, only the practical side of human life. The Jews are one of our great races in history, and the only race that history has deprived of nationality.

This unique wrong has brought its penalties to the rest of the world as well as to the Jews. Probably in no race is the average level of ability quite so high as in the Jewish race, but if the Jew's contributions to the idea of the world have not been quite proportionate to his abilities, the reason is to be found mainly in the denial of nationality.

When the Jews were a struggling and usually oppressed race in the mountains of Judaea, divided with the Greeks the product of human thought and aspiration, and were as clearly superior in morals and religion as the Greeks in art.

Despite their great cleverness and their deep universal respect for the things of the mind, they have done nothing like it since. There is no race in which it is truer to say that the Jew is parasitic, and it is their consciousness of the fact that has made so many Jewish Zionists in art as in politics he has seemed to be experimenting in civilization and in the future of his own, and despite great successes he has often been a coarsening and a disorienting force.

To the extent to which that is true, it is the punishment of the world for the great wrong that history has done to the race, and tardily and timidly being repaired.

The new University of Jerusalem may be the beginning of a new Renaissance of the East. But it may have an even greater value to the world than the University of the East. The Jewish genius, given a national home, and equipped for the first time for nearly two thousand years with a nerve-center of its own, may give the world a force, comparable to its past.

MEEKER BOYS AD AND BUSY THIS SPRING

Elmira Business Institute Preparing Students for Success

Notes of Week's Happenings
Furnished by "School Worth While" by Corning Friends

Completing Junior Accounting. Mr. R. L. Little, Galesville, Pa., who recently acquired a position with an Elmira firm, has completed the required work for the Junior Accounting Course and has been awarded his Certificate of Graduation. Success, N.Y.

Return Home. Mr. Elsie Zimmer, Corning, Pa., is discontinuing his position with the Elmira firm, has completed the required work for the Junior Accounting Course and has been awarded his Certificate of Graduation. Success, N.Y.

Acropolis Position. Miss M. F. Saveroff of Odessa, N. Y., has completed the Bankers Course and has been awarded her position with an Elmira firm.

Bank Position. Miss V. M. T. Galesville, a graduate of the Wellsville, Pa., High School, who has been studying in the Institute during the winter, is filling the position of stenographer at the First National Bank, Horseheads, N. Y.

Sympathy. The student body, faculty and management of the Institute wish to extend to Miss Corning their sincere sympathy in the loss of her father, who's death occurred on Thursday morning. She is a student in the Institute.

Practice Work. Each subject given in Meeker's Business Institute is followed by a practice test. Much interest has manifested in the practice work of April in the practice work in the Pennsylvania class. The practice work on Tuesday morning, over the demonstration of the improvement in writing for the month. Sixty-four papers were submitted by the members of the Business Department. After careful inspection, and after the students in their opinion had made the greatest improvement during the month, Charles Mackintosh of Elmira, N. Y., received the largest number of votes and was awarded the prize for the month. Next month's practice work will be who has made the greatest improvement in business writing—since entering the Institute.

Assembly. Friday's Assembly was a pleasant day at Meeker's. Several important announcements as to school work and attendance were made. Miss Pretha Howard of Addison gave a reading which was very much enjoyed. The work of the hour was the presence of Miss Corning, who was the delightfully entertained the student body by two readings. The students appreciated her efforts and wish that she might come again.

The Meeker Plan. The course of study at Meeker's Business Institute has so arranged that one may begin at any time and complete the course by special arrangement, or the first Monday of the month. To the young man who wishes to learn what he can learn, the Meeker plan is a good one. It is a plan that will lead to success in the winter months, discontinue your work during the summer months, and when you can earn good money, then re-enter school during the winter months, and when you are left off without loss of time in school. This plan is particularly advantageous for men and women of farming communities. Every person, whether of the farm or the city, needs a business education. "The Meeker Plan" shows the way.

To Graduating Classes. The time is now here when the members of the senior classes of high schools are preparing to enter "What School Next?" There must be the teacher, the doctor, the lawyer, the business man and the business man. There is not a trade, a profession, or vocation, but that will lead to success if they call for better business training. Then the large number of young people graduating from high school this June should be directed in the Meeker plan, which will lead to success in the winter months, discontinue your work during the summer months, and when you can earn good money, then re-enter school during the winter months, and when you are left off without loss of time in school. This plan is particularly advantageous for men and women of farming communities. Every person, whether of the farm or the city, needs a business education. "The Meeker Plan" shows the way.

Why Take a Business Course? By Louise Manning, Watkins, N. Y.

If each student in Meeker's Business Institute were asked why he chose this line of work, I doubt if many of the answers would be the same. There are so many positions to which one would like to advance that it is not possible to have a single answer in mind.

Perhaps the greatest answer

TOOPNE COAL OFFICE

Stenben Coal & Supply Company to be Ready at Post Plant Monday

The new coal and supply office at Stenben Coal & Supply Company is opening in Painted Post. The new plant is situated near the Erie station in Painted Post and the site of the old plant, formerly owned and occupied by William Morris.

Work of tearing down the old buildings and erecting new ones has been in progress for the past two months and is now practically completed. This new plant will make the third plant operating in the Painted Post area, the other two being located near the Lackawanna station at Gibson and the other at East Second street.

The property at East Second street has been rented by the company which plan to move from that location to the property which was purchased in the alley between Erie avenue and First streets and Columbia and Pearl streets on June 1. The Corning Company will move into the property on East Second street.

BOYS CAUSING TROUBLE FORCED TO PAY DAMAGES

A report was made at police headquarters last evening that some young men were conducting a riot in a disorderly manner in a saloon in the city. They had stolen a paper can from one of the patrons and had deposited it on the porch of a nearby house, had stolen a dish from the kitchen and had broken it, and had tied the wheels of an automobile.

On Monday morning Morris was dispatched to the scene, learned that the boys who were forced to make amends for the damage done.

Chicken dinner Sunday at the Ritz, 75c.

It would be "because I want to do it," said a young man who was asked why he was in the business world. "Yes, that is what I think of first; but that is only a better chance thought. There is no better chance in the business world, than to the young man who has a desire that advancement. Even though he is a young man, he seems that something always leads brighter just ahead."

MRS. WILHELMY SAVED BY FRIEND

Doctor Advised Operation Friend Said Try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound First

St. Paul, Minn. — "I was all run-down from overwork and worry, had no appetite, could not sleep at night, and looked like a skeleton (my boys and one girl) and did not get any strength after my last baby was born. I was getting worse and thinner every day. The doctor said I had to go to the hospital, but this could not do on account of my family. So I went to a friend of mine and told her what the doctor had told me and she said, 'Now do as I tell you, try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as I have done. It helped me.' So I started taking the Vegetable Compound and I noticed after the first few bottles that I felt considerably better. After taking 9 or 10 bottles I got over my fainting spells. Everybody who sees me now notices the great improvement in my health. I am gaining in weight and strength and am feeling fine. Eat well and sleep good. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, 250 Duke Street, St. Paul, Minnesota.

Politics In Pennsylvania

HARRISBURG, Pa., May 2.—

The Patriot says: "State Treasurer Charles Snyder does not yet know definitely whether he will have a state job after next Monday noon when his term in the treasury expires. He has been on the hill since 1913 as Representative, Senator, Auditor General and State Treasurer, and has been hoping to get a deputyship in the Auditor General's Department next week. Edward Martin, who takes the office next Tuesday, has not been here this week, because of death in the family and no announcement has been made of whom he will name to take his place."

"An opinion from the Attorney General's office yesterday informed Auditor General Samuel H. Lewis that it will be left to President Judge Nevins M. Warner, York, to award him as State Treasurer next Monday, and for J. Boyd Crumrine, Orphans' Court judge of Washington County, to award Martin Tuesday. The opinion rules that both judges are qualified to administer oaths, and that as the duty is ministerial and involves no judicial discretion, it can be performed outside of their judicial districts. The law and constitution do not specify who shall administer these oaths, and the Secretary of the Commonwealth, Lewis, has not been asked to award the office as he does most State officials."

"Since agreement by Republican leaders on former Judge Albert W. Johnson, of Lewisburg, as a candidate for the judgeship of the Middle District, succeeding the late Judge Charles B. Witmer, most of the candidates contending for the place have dropped from the race. The place probably would have gone to Federal District Attorney Andrew B. Dunsmore, Wellsboro, despite his age, but he informed leaders he does not want the place."

"Harold Evans, Philadelphia lawyer named to the Public Service Commission Tuesday night by Governor Pinchot, yesterday said he would decline the office before his stenographer. As Mr. Dorman, who is a society leader, said immediately in the hearing of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit review committee."

"Commenting on Evans' appointment, the Evening Citizen of Philadelphia, agrees with Governor Pinchot that Evans is 'peculiarly fitted for the service' and 'for the general restoration of public confidence in the Commission.' It adds: 'A lawyer, a specialist in public utility law and practice, keen in analysis, sharp in his challenge, his appointment would seem to bring to the Commission an element in the protection of the public interest against over-reaching policies of public utility corporations, which has been lacking.'"

"Ronnie R. Korb, Potsville, special assistant to the United States Attorney General since July, 1923, has resigned to resume private practice in Potsville. His challenge, his appointment would seem to bring to the Commission an element in the protection of the public interest against over-reaching policies of public utility corporations, which has been lacking."

"Because of death of L. B. Wederman, prothonotary for Scranton for the Superior Court."
