MAKE DEMPSEY BOX OR QUIT NEW SLOGAN

Campaign Started to Save Good Name of Old-Time Ring Champions

The New York Evening World has started a movement to smoke out Jack Dempsey, the boxing champion and is sending out the following questionnaire to newspapers of the country.

"Consensus of boxing experts in New York is that the bout between Jack Dempsey and Harry Wells for the heavyweight championship of the world, slated for Michigan City, Ind., will never be held and is a deliberate fraud on the public.

"Believing the public to be determined that the heavyweight title shall be honestly defended, the Evening World is publishing a questionnaire today and will publish the replies to it daily until its readers have expressed their opinions.

"The order that nationwide expression may be had we are requesting you and other American sports editors to join with us in publishing this questionnaire and keeping tally of the replies.

"At the end of three weeks the grand totals will be published in each of the papers co-operating and forwarded to the boxing commissions and to Dempsey.

"First—Do you believe a champion should defend his title at least once a year?

"Second—Do you believe Dempsey has any intention of meeting Harry Wells?

"Third—Do you believe that the proposed Michigan City bout will ever be held?

"Fourth—Do you believe he has any intention of meeting Tunney or any other serious contender?

"Fifth—Do you believe he has only right to his title if he does not defend it within the next six months?

"Sixth—Do you believe the second boxing commissions, acting unofficially should declare the bout forfeited should he not defend it within six months?

THE JOHNSON WENT TO THE CAUCUS. CORNELIA—HEM HAS BEEN GONE THREE DAYS AND NO NEWS. SHE'S WORRIED. EVERY TIME HE GOES ON A TRIP HE FORGETS TO WRITE.

HELL HIT THE CEILING WHEN THEY SHOW HIM THAT WIRE, BUT I'M SICK AND TIRED OF HIS WALKING OUT OF HERE AND FORGETTING ALL ABOUT ME. I'VE LET HIM SOFT-SOAP ME TOO LONG.

ELMER VANCE

Copyright, 1926, Warner Bros. "THE LIMITED MAIL" with Elmer Vance, a glorification of this story by Warner Bros.

SYNOPSIS
Elmer Vance, freight engineer, has received orders to take the 10:00 train to New York. He has left his wife, who is suddenly stricken at the birthday party for her mother, and has taken the train. He has left his wife, who is suddenly stricken at the birthday party for her mother, and has taken the train.

CHAPTER VIII—Continued
Bob, pulling down on the one with all his strength and cutting off the flow of forward power, with the all too late, and to no earthly avail.
Ten seconds later, Limited and freight were piled up and jumbled on the tracks in an indiscriminate mass of twisted splinters, bolts and twisted steel.
Bob, when he came to, found himself unhampered of movement in the midst of a situation, tortured mass of iron through which he was able to scramble with comparative ease and drop to the safety of ground, unharmed but for the shock.
In the horror of the moment his premonition, thought was for his friends in the first mail car. That had been reduced to kindling wood, literally, and was afire. A brakeman, mistaking Bob's intention, tried to halt him but Bob shook him off and plunged hysterically into the wreckage, searching for Jim and Bobby.

He found them, after a time. Bobby, held in Jim's arms, was lightly caught by the debris, was crying, trying to rouse his father. Jim was still, white as his eyes closed. Bob, struck and as he saw that Jim was stone dead.
The flames were eating their all-consuming pathway directly toward the spot, so Bob, placing Bobby aside in safety, worked frantically to extricate Jim's body from the fast, crowning desolation. But it was not to be.
Bob gave up, however, only when the flames licked close to Bobby, who was screaming in fear and grief.

"Kiss your Daddy Jim!" Bob choked, holding the child down to his lips brushed the still warm cheeks of his father. He did not know, but he was crying.
Then Bob bent over and kissed him, too, while hot tears fell from his eyes upon the face of his father. He had to crawl away now, to save his own life and that of Bobby. When he got clear again of the wreckage he was in a state of shock for his friend; of terror for the extent of the disaster for which, as driver, he was responsible, to a fear of greater extent and the loss of the crushing truth was that he had failed his trust—and at what a cost. Hardly knowing or caring what he was doing, Bob seized Bobby up in his arms and staggered off into the night with him into the wild and barren mountainside country, away from the screams and groans of the maimed and frightened, in the tangled, burning wreckage, to his moral unfaithfulness to duty.

CHAPTER IX
There have been, in the long and often honorable history of beds and bedrooms, surprisingly odd bed fellows; dukes and beggarmaids, prelates and—but then, there is little in a man's nature that is not inexhaustible. The rule for the person for the exception to the rule; the case of Caroline and Jane form an exception to the exception.
Because, in any serious phase of life, there never were more intimate than those who were not too strong strangers to each other; intimate, that is, in a sense of not having a single emotional secret from one another; in boring with the eyes of sex instinct through the defensive armor of each other's soul; in trying to get on as if they did not know full well that their spirits were naked, one to the other. Experience, however, is no advance in this, for through the medium of half a dozen words and a night together it was given to Mary to read Salome. To begin with, Jane wore chiffon pajamas while Caroline wore a plain and simple nightgown.
Upstairs, however, that morning following the party, Jane ascertained, by a slight turn of her head, that her bedmate was awake. They exchanged frosty good-mornings. Then Jane gave herself up to a volubly's animal laudation in the yielding deliciousness of the feather bed—that locally considered barbaric and outlandish furnishing in which she lay in the spare West, by the pioneering Widow O'Leary.
It did not take long to discover that the morning light was over on a high shelf that she had overlooked in the gaslight of the night—that was, a photograph of the Limited's wreckage—law while fingers (it seemed his heart) said, and reached for his airbrake and his throttle simultaneously.

REPUBLICAN CAUCUS HELD AT TROUPSBURG

TROUPSBURG, Oct. 3.—The Republican caucus was held at the town hall Saturday afternoon beginning at 2 o'clock. Robert Cotter defeated T. M. Stiles for supervisor by about 50 votes. Griffith was elected superintendent of highways and Mrs. Edna White was elected town clerk and C. M. Card was elected town assessor. Frank Potter, Virgil Bollen and Herman Holt were elected as town auditors.

TROUPEBURG ITEMS

Alton White of Greenwood has bought the garage of "Tom Bollen" and Ed Eck is moving into the H. G. Austin house. The cooling station has installed $300 worth of new machinery to handle Grand Falls milk. "Eck Baker and family" are moving to Troupsburg in town. Rev. Lewis has returned from Indiana and taken up his work again. He is much improved in health. A reception was held at the home of Mrs. Myron Austin and Mrs. Edna White.

HORNBY

HORNBY, Oct. 3.—Irene, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hovey has been ill—Elmer Henton and Lewis Ross and Fred went Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. John Benton. J. L. McCleughlin is recovering from his recent illness. Mrs. Nettie McCleughlin has returned to her work in Corning after spending a week here. Mr. and Mrs. William Brown and Mrs. Sarah Ballou of Auburn, and Mr. and Mrs. V. Brower of Altamont spent Sunday at the home of George Brower.

FIND LOST KIDNERS

LOCKPORT.—The several troops of Lockport Boy Scouts are again this year playing a most important role at the Niagara County Fair, where many persons have fervently expressed their wonder as to how the fair could have ever gone without the Scouts' efficient, manly services in years gone by. Of the sixty to seventy Scouts, the grounds no less than a score are kept busy hunting up and tending lost children or lost youngsters parents from whom they had become separated in the crowds.

FOREIGN TRAFFIC

BUFFALO—Main street, Buffalo, probably has a greater "foreign traffic" in automobiles than any other thoroughfare in the United States, and in addition is the principal highway for 100,000 Buffalo automobiles and leading to the United States, and in addition is the principal highway for 100,000 Buffalo automobiles and leading to the United States, and in addition is the principal highway for 100,000 Buffalo automobiles and leading to the United States.

CENTRAL MEN TO GET RAISE

Increase of Six Cents an Hour for Clerks, Baggage and Freight Handlers

A number of employees of the New York Central Railroad in this city benefit by six cents an hour increase in pay expected to be authorized by the company for all clerks and baggage and freight handlers on its lines, according to local officials of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks. This increase does not apply to those in supervisory positions.

Formal application for this increase was made August 1, with the provision that the increase when granted should be retroactive from September 1. Workers in this class have made an agreement with the road that any changes that may require to be made in their working conditions or pay must be made with a 30-day notice attached. While their working agreement expired June 30, no formal application was made for two months afterward. The average wage of clerks here is from $105 to $112 per month. If granted the increase will augment this from $18 to $19 monthly. Freight handlers are paid at an average rate of $14 daily now, and their increase will be based on a daily rate.

Official evidence confirms that the road will make no objection to the increase this year. It is pointed out that the road is earning more than ever before, while labor for those in the departments represented by the brotherhood is increasing monthly.

Increases have been allowed in other departments but this particular department has not received an increase since 1922 when employees were granted a raise amounting to $3 or $4 monthly.
