UNCLE WIGGLY
By HOWARD R. GARIS

UNCLE WIGGLY AND JOHNNIE'S SLIDE
Johnnie Bushytail, the squirrel boy, slipped out of a large knot hole at the back of the hollow tree where he lived. Johnnie often used this knot hole when he wished to get out quietly so his mother wouldn't know about it. Not that Johnnie wanted to do anything wrong, but he just felt a little mischievous like an account of it being Thanksgiving week.

And when Johnnie slipped out this secret way, his brother Billie went with him. What one little squirrel chap did the other was sure to do.

"Oh, I know how we can have some fun," suddenly chattered Johnnie. "Do you see that place of clothes line there? And he pointed to a bit dangling from a tree branch where Mrs. Bushytail had hung up the clothes to dry on Monday.

"What about the line?" asked Billie. "Are you going to jump like Lulu and Alice Wigglesworth, is that?"

"No, but with that rope we can play a funny trick on Uncle Wiggly," proposed Johnnie.

"What sort of a trick?" Billie wanted to know.

"Well, when Uncle Wiggly comes to see me, he'll be on the ground," whispered Johnnie. "He'll put his paw in. You and I will be hiding in the bushes, holding the other end of the rope. And when Uncle Wiggly comes back, we'll pull on it, and he'll come back to where he came back to."

"Yes, I guess it'll be all right," agreed Billie, but he wasn't quite sure of it. He thought he'd better spread the rope on the ground, with the loop on the tree, hidden under some low hanging branch where the squirrel boys hid in the bushes and waited to play the trick.

Just as the boys were about to come from the store, he had Uncle Wiggly, the old man, and he stopped to talk to him about some Christmas work he'd been doing. Billie and Johnnie got tired of waiting and went to the store.

When they came back, they found Uncle Wiggly sitting on the ground, looking very tired and old. He was holding the rope in his paw, and he was looking at it with a sad expression.

"Oh, get me out!" he begged.

Let's look for a place where a pole or fence or stick or anything else would be handy to pull on. The boys looked around and found a place where a pole or fence or stick or anything else would be handy to pull on.

Johnnie often used this knot hole when he wished to get out quietly so his mother wouldn't know about it. Not that Johnnie wanted to do anything wrong, but he just felt a little mischievous like an account of it being Thanksgiving week.

And when Johnnie slipped out this secret way, his brother Billie went with him. What one little squirrel chap did the other was sure to do.

"Oh, I know how we can have some fun," suddenly chattered Johnnie. "Do you see that place of clothes line there? And he pointed to a bit dangling from a tree branch where Mrs. Bushytail had hung up the clothes to dry on Monday.

"What about the line?" asked Billie. "Are you going to jump like Lulu and Alice Wigglesworth, is that?"

"No, but with that rope we can play a funny trick on Uncle Wiggly," proposed Johnnie.

"What sort of a trick?" Billie wanted to know.

"Well, when Uncle Wiggly comes to see me, he'll be on the ground," whispered Johnnie. "He'll put his paw in. You and I will be hiding in the bushes, holding the other end of the rope. And when Uncle Wiggly comes back, we'll pull on it, and he'll come back to where he came back to."

"Yes, I guess it'll be all right," agreed Billie, but he wasn't quite sure of it. He thought he'd better spread the rope on the ground, with the loop on the tree, hidden under some low hanging branch where the squirrel boys hid in the bushes and waited to play the trick.

Just as the boys were about to come from the store, he had Uncle Wiggly, the old man, and he stopped to talk to him about some Christmas work he'd been doing. Billie and Johnnie got tired of waiting and went to the store.

When they came back, they found Uncle Wiggly sitting on the ground, looking very tired and old. He was holding the rope in his paw, and he was looking at it with a sad expression.

"Oh, get me out!" he begged.

Let's look for a place where a pole or fence or stick or anything else would be handy to pull on. The boys looked around and found a place where a pole or fence or stick or anything else would be handy to pull on.

FIFTH AVENUE IN ITS BROWNSTONE ERA—1884

A reproduction of one of 180 murals in the Ter-Centenary Exhibit of New York, which will continue until 1926, at Wampanoag.

In 1884 there was a great plot to build the sidewalks, and Fifth Avenue was like a petted chocolate pudding.

At the right was the Cotton Tree, a wonderful place for an outing. Little does New York, passing the Public Library today at Fifth Avenue and 42nd Street, stop to remember that the place sought now by those who claim for wisdom was once the source of the city's water.

ARMY ELEVEN TAKING LEAD

Score in Midgame Stands 7 to 3 in Favor of Soldiers

POLO GROUNDS, New York, Nov. 28.—(AP)—With the most spectacular picture of American football as its background, the Army and Navy eleven met this afternoon in the 25th battle of the series which annually brings the eastern season to its most colorful climax.

A gala, colorful crowd of 45,000 spectators, including high government and service officials, thronged the big oval-shaped National League park to witness the spectacle and the maneuvers of the Midshipmen and Cadets.

These maneuvers, occupying the better share of an hour before the game, thrilled the big gathering as the "double time" of the first team, grey-clad Cadet boys, then the blue-uniformed "Midship" brigade marched in the center of the field, stirring the rival bands added to the martial atmosphere, while even the weather, cool and brisk, added a snappy touch to the movements of the future admirals and generals.

The Navy won the toss and kicked off, Edgy booting to Wilson, who ran the ball back 15 yards to the Army's 30-yard mark. The first rush was smothered, but the Cadets sprang a surprise by trying a forward pass, but Shapley, Navy back, knocked it down, and Trappnell was forced to punt.

After the Navy's passing attempt had been broken up, Wilson punted to Wilson on the Army's 45-yard line. From there Wilson broke through left tackle on the first play and dodged his way 42 yards to the 10-yard line. Hamilton brought the feet Army back to earth. When three line plays were smothered, the Army called in its star drop kicker, Red Rieder, but his attempt was partially blocked and went only a few yards. Born recovering it on Navy's eight yard line, no score was made in the first period.

Army Goals Lead
After successive fumbles by each team around mid-field, Army opened another attack from Navy's 46 yard mark, penetrating to the 14 yard line when Trappnell took a 25 yard pass from Harding. Three rushes netted only three yards more, but Harding tossed a pass over the line to Captain Ball, end, who grabbed the ball and fought his way over the line.

for a touchdown. Wilson kicked the extra point and the mid-game score was Army 7, Navy 3.

Navy's heavy air attack threatened toward the close of the half, Hamilton completing a 10 yard throw to Shapley, then a 19 yard heave to Beret, end, who was downed on the Cadet 26 yard line.

Two other passes from this point failed, then Dally, Army center, threw a 13 yard pass to break up the attack just as the whistle sounded for the end of the half.

Army Army by Navy 5.
Navy was the first to score, Hamilton drop kicking a 19 yard field goal from a difficult angle in the twenty yard mark in the second period after the Midshipmen had stopped Cadet drives toward their goal line, but the West Pointers came back with a spectacular rush to tally a touchdown on a forward pass, Harding to Captain Baxter.

Army outstruck the Navy more than two to one through the first half, scoring six first downs to three for the Midshipmen. Each team had a turnover, the Midshipmen three and each had one intercepted.

—Miss Hannon and Curtis Harrower, Radio Entertainers, to Give Concert

The Ashlar Club of the Masonic Fraternity in this city has made arrangements for a concert to be given at the Masonic Cathedral on Monday evening, December 7, which promises to be one of the musical events of the season. The concert is to be given by Curtis Harrower, noted organist and pianist, and Miss Jean Harrower, soprano soloist.

Both of these noted artists are well known to their radio audiences as they have broadcasted from various stations for some time. Corning is especially fortunate in having many talented musicians to whom such a program as that offered by these talented artists will appear grand.

Since their first dual appearance a year ago Miss Hannon and Mr. Harrower have journeyed far into the realm, where is found court of sweet sounds and those who are familiar with their work anticipate their appearance here with much pleasure.

Mr. Harrower is well known in Corning, for although he has never appeared in program here he has visited in this section on numerous occasions. During last summer he was a guest of Corning friends for a few days and during that time had an opportunity to meet many of the music lovers of the city. He is best known to radio audiences through his interpretations of masterpieces on the piano organ but has also been heard in piano recitals.

Three years ago the Masonic Fraternity promoted a series of concerts and entertainments here which proved to be some of the best ever heard here and through their efforts many noted artists were brought to Corning. It is expected that the concert will be of the same high class and is expected to appeal to those with the love of harmony and the sense of interpretation.

Three people are gathered around the vehicle: a man in a suit stands by the open driver's side door, a woman in a long dress stands behind him, and another man is seated in the driver's seat. In the foreground, a young boy in a dark jacket and cap is sweeping the ground with a broom. The ground is littered with many small, dark, irregular shapes, possibly leaves or debris. The background is plain, with a few faint lines suggesting a street or sidewalk.

The Christmas Fund Savings Clubs are the best idea of the century because they solve the financing of Christmas purchases.

However, they mature so short a time before Christmas that they bunch holiday shopping into one grand rush during the last few days.

Many who would prefer to shop early—when stores can give real service—when stocks are at their best—when there is no rush and crush—hesitate to do so, as their Christmas money is not yet available.

These stores invite you to shop NOW—avoid last day disappointments, the crowds and poor service. Now, while stocks are new and full and complete in line and variety and style and sizes, pick out the exact gifts you want. A very small deposit will hold goods until Christmas. Checks are available.

In this way you get the full advantage of early shopping. Shop at your leisure and pay when convenient later on. We can best serve you and it is our pleasure to do so early when you can see our full and lovely stocks of Christmas gifts at their best.
