

THOMAS GIBBONS HAWKES

Founder of Some of Corning's Leading Enterprises

Died Last Night.

DIED—July 7, 1913, at 8:07 P. M., at his home in Corning, Thomas Gibbons Hawkes, president of T. G. Hawkes & Co., president of the Corning Glass Works and president of the Corning Fibre Company. Funeral services Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the residence 24 East Second street. Rev. Malcolm R. Johnson, pastor of Christ Church, in charge of the service. Interment will be made in the Hope Cemetery area.

From the humblest beginnings Thomas G. Hawkes built up in Corning the largest deep cut glass plant in America and the largest business of his kind in the world. Starting in business for himself at the age of 20 years later the incorporated company which later his name employed 400 men. His glass cutting plant did not limit the field of his business activity. He was successful in collaborating with Frederick Carder, maker of the Corning Glass Works, in the establishment of the Corning Fibre Company of Corning.

He worked with that idea in mind from the start.

Mr. Hawkes spent much of his time in his shops observing the product as it came through, offering a suggestion or giving a word of praise or criticism to his men there. He was a man of great energy and he selected his employees with great care. He laid great emphasis upon the sobriety and the regularity of habits among his employees. For a century and a half Saratoga Springs have been noted for their medicinal qualities. The prevailing components found in ARONACK, from which ARONACK GINGER ALE is bottled, are chloride of sodium, bicarbonate of lithia, bicarbonate of soda, bromide sodium and chloride potassium.

Aronack Ginger Ale needs no pepper or "dope" to increase its pungency as the famous Aronack Spring Water contains at first hand from Nature's own laboratory all the necessary elements. Aronack was awarded a Gold Medal at Louisiana Exposition and highest award to any water at Jamestown Exposition.

Aronack Ginger Ale, your physician will tell you, besides being an excellent refrigerant, a refreshing drink, promotes the appetite, assists digestion, and acts most agreeably on the stomach and kidneys.
