MAID SAYS MRS. HALL AT HOME NIGHT OF MURDER

PRESIDENT HAS TAKEN ONLY STEP

What Mr. Coolidge Said About America's Entrance Into Court Not New

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Political Correspondent for The Evening Leader
Copyright 1926, By The Evening Leader

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—President Coolidge has taken the only step that could be taken to hasten the entrance of the United States into the World Court—if indeed, it is fated that America shall enter at all.

What Mr. Coolidge said in Kansas City is not new. He told the same thing to the Washington correspondents a month ago—long before the elections—and they broadcast it to the world. Mr. Coolidge made it clear that he considered the Geneva conference's action a rejection of the American reservations and that he intended to let the matter rest without referring it again to the senate. So far as the United States was concerned, his duty was and is done. That the issue is dead, so far as Europe is concerned, it is alive. If Europe wants the United States in the World Court, the simple way to accept all the reservations including the ambiguously worded fifth reservation.

The significance of the Kansas City speech is that the powers of the world declined to take the newspaper statements seriously and refrained the hope that when the department of state got down to the business of answering the notes of the various governments a way would be found to reconcile differences of opinion. Mr. Coolidge's speech is intended to give the American position bluntly and unequivocally and the saying of it in a public speech was deemed less offensive than in a diplomatic note.

Now it will be easier to quote from the president's address in the diplomatic notes. This form of reply is considered much more courteous than to send a note of definite refusal employing such similar phrases as were used by Mr. Coolidge in Kansas City.

If any of the foreign governments had any doubt about America's position the president has removed it. The case reverted to them. Probably it will not be acted on at once but at the next meeting in Geneva. By that time the powers will have had a chance to determine of just what value American participation is to them and whether they can go any higher price to get America into the Court. The speeches made at the last Geneva conference indicated that Canada at least did not relish the idea of giving the United States a veto on advisory opinions to the Court where American questions are involved. Canada has a theory that an "American question" may concern her, too, some of the Americans who listened to the speeches at Geneva and who are themselves anxious to get America into the Court carried away the impression that the fifth reservation would never be accepted by the foreign governments.

There is a possibility of compromise. It lies in the fact that the objections to an acceptance of the American fifth reservation are chiefly hypothetical and that the right of the United States to veto an advisory opinion might never be exercised. Also, administrations change and public opinion changes. The possibility that a modification of the fifth reservation may be accomplished later on is the hope held out by the American pro-Court elements.

Certainly the rumors that the United States will withdraw its proposal to enter the Court are premature. Mr. Coolidge will not take such a step at this time. He feels that the foreign governments should have ample time to consider it and that if they wish to defer action until the assembly meets in Geneva next September, this is something to which the United States could have no justifiable objection. If the United States is therefore, to enter the Court, the way has been prepared for the only action that can bring the United States into that tribunal and Mr. Coolidge has carried away all doubts abroad and placed the matter squarely before the other governments of the world whose acceptance of the American reservations may be presented. Whether 48 nations can be brought into unanimous agreement is a point on which there may well be doubts. The objection of one country would keep America out. Canada might be that nation.

Reports Show "Uncle Joe" Did Not Regard His Birthplace Highly

GREENSBORO, N. C., Nov. 13.— —"Uncle Joe" Cannon, who died yesterday at his home in Danville, Ill., was born 90 years ago in Guilford county, near here, but apparently did not regard his birthplace with high favor.

About 12 years ago he paid the only visit of his life to the scene which he had left at the age of four. After he had been feted by residents of Greensboro, he was driven in an automobile to visit the spot where he was born.

"Uncle Joe," said a member of the party, when the house was reached, "there is where you were born."

"The hell it is," replied Mr. Cannon unmoved. "Drive on."

TESTIMONY TO BE EXCLUDED

That In Support of New York's Claims To Power Potentialities Not To Be Used

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—(AP)—Testimony in support of New York state's claims to water power potentialities in the St. Lawrence River will be excluded from the present Supreme Court hearing before Special Master Charles E. Hughes in the protracted lake level litigation.

Mr. Hughes' ruling, which confines the empire state's case to issues presented in Wisconsin's original proceeding against the sanitary district of Chicago, may lead to further court action, centered upon power issues, for it limits New York to presentation of evidence on questions of navigation.

New York's power claims are not prejudiced in the ruling, and counsel are prepared to continue in the present hearing offering as much evidence as is admissible and reserving power rights for a later action should the decision in the Wisconsin case leave the law on the power issues still to be determined by the supreme court.

TRIBUTES POUR IN TODAY FROM FRIENDS OF UNCLE JOE CANNON

Funeral Services for the Patriarch, Who Entered Long Sleep Yesterday, Will Probably be Held Tuesday

DANVILLE, Ill., Nov. 13.—(AP)—"Uncle Joe" Cannon, the nation's oldest statesman, who first ran for public office the year Lincoln was elected to the presidency, has found the rest he sought when he retired from public life three years ago and "came home to die".

Funeral services for the patriarch, who entered the long sleep at noon yesterday in the broad brick mansion from which he went to congress fifty-three years ago, probably will be held next Tuesday, with burial in Spring Hill Cemetery, in the Vermilion Hills, beneath a modest monument which he had erected on the family lot.

Tributes to the dead statesman poured in from friends and former foes who recalled the vivid days when Cannon ruled the National House of Representatives with an iron hand.

The nation has lost one of its most able, interesting and beloved men of the last generation", President Coolidge said in a message of sympathy to Miss Helen Cannon, daughter of the former speaker.

"He will always rank as a great American. His great influence gave his country a better government."

While his political career dated back to the days of the great emancipator, "Uncle Joe" had other traits in common with Lincoln. His features were often said to be of the Lincoln type. From ears to chin there was fringe of close cropped beard, the upper lip clean shaved.

Also there had been no man in public life, Lincoln excepted, around whose life grew up such a lore of tales. Certainly there has never been a man so lampooned in caricature and cartoon.

But while Cannon's term of service in congress stretched over nearly a half century and was the longest on record, there was one man who called him "Kid". He is Gen. J. Warren Keifer, 90, of Springfield, Ohio, a former speaker of the house, who served with Uncle Joe for years in congress.

"I always called Joe the 'Kid'", explained General Keifer. "You see he was 90 years old on January 7th. He enjoyed that little joke and often in his letters he would sign himself just that way."

INTEREST IN WORLD COURT IS REVIVED

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—(AP)—Interest in the capital in the World Court situation revived today as President Coolidge resumed his duties at the White House after a three day trip to Kansas City during which he declared in his Armistice Day speech that the United States would join the tribunal on its own terms or remain outside.

In the face of considerable confusion in the answers of the five member powers to the inquiry of the United States as to the acceptability of the senate reservations to the protocol of adherence, Presiden Coolidge was pictured as confident that his declaration in the West would lead to final and decisive steps soon toward the determination of the question of America's membership.

The president's statement was regarded as ascertain to remove any doubt as to the determination of the United States to take the Court on its own terms or leave it alone.

The next week in the expectations of the president's advisors, should see an end to the prolonged delay on the part of signatory powers in replying to Secretary Kellogg's inquiries of several months ago regarding the attitude on the reservations.

MINERS WILL REFER PLANS TO DISTRICTS

LONDON, Nov. 13.—(AP)—Delegates representing the striking coal miners, in conference here today, voted to refer the government's settlement proposals to the various districts with the recommendation that they be accepted.

Many of the delegates were dissatisfied with the terms, and there was the possibility that they might reject the proposals without referring them to the districts.

ROBBER HURT HOLDING UP GEM STORE

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—(AP)—One of three robbers, who attempted to hold up a Broadway jewelry store today was probably fatally wounded in a gun fight with police. A policeman, a bystander and clerk were wounded.

The robbery was attempted by three armed men at the jewelry store of Henry Silberfeld. It was frustrated by two policemen, and when the robbers opened fire, the district, one of the busiest in the city, was thrown into an uproar.

When the smoke of battle cleared a man believed to be Benjamin Grogan, one of the robber trio, was found to have been shot through the stomach and his condition was said to be critical. Patrolman Thomas Lorrigan of the traffic squad was wounded in the left side and Rudolph Berk, a bystander, was wounded in the knee cap. David Jacobs, store clerk, received a bullet in the shoulder. Their condition was not serious.

TEN CENT STORE NOTEBOOK CLAIMS LARGE PART OF TODAY'S SESSION AT TRIAL

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Nov. 13.—(AP)—Two sharply contrasting pictures of Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall have been drawn in the court room where she and her brother, Henry and Willie Stevens, are being tried for murder.

One picture, by a former maid in her home, shows her sitting alone in her library quietly playing solitaire at the time her husband, the Rev. Edward W. Hall, was slain with Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills, choir singer in his church. The other picture, drawn by Alexander Simpson, special prosecutor in the trial, shows her as an implacable woman driven to a murderous frenzy by hate and jealousy, and capably going to a dark night to a deserted farm outside New Brunswick and there witnessing, if not actually participating in the murder of her husband and the woman.

Adding heavier strokes to his picture, the prosecutor again and again has referred to the fact that Mrs. Mills throat was slashed after she was shot three times in the head, and he has stressed his contention that her throat and larnyx, "the singing organs" were torn out. The naturally toughened woman who is on trial for her life has shown no sign of flinching. Although today is the ninth day of the trial she continues to show the same calmness. Dressed in black, her pale face untouched by rouge, she sits quietly between her two brothers as witness after witness takes the stand.

Introduction in court of the clothing worn by her husband on the night he was slain, the use of a wax figure representing a human head in illustrating wounds found on the slain couple, the brandishing of a razor by a witness in illustrating how Mrs. Mills' throat might have been cut—all have failed to break down her self control.

Mrs. Louise Geist Riehl, called by the state late yesterday, was the witness who testified that Mrs. Hall was playing solitaire at the time of the double slaying. The former maid in the Hall home said that she had gone there at about 10 o'clock on the night of the crime, and that when she went upstairs Mrs. Hall was alone in the library, and that she had left at 10 o'clock at the approximate time of the murder.

A ten cent store notebook became exhibit "S-100" and claimed a large part of today's session of the Hall-Mills trial. The writing in the book "which for convenience we will call a diary," had been identified by Charlotte Mills, daughter of the slain Eleanor R. Mills, as that of the Rev. Edward W. Hall, slain with Mrs. Mills more than four years ago.

The "diary" part of the book consisted of a number of pages attached to the covers at the moment.

The state said they had been torn out, while the defense preferred to speak of it as a "mutilated book".

Over objection of the defense that the defendants had no knowledge of the so-called diary, had never seen it and were in no sense concerned with it, it was admitted to show the feeling between the minister and choir singer. The contents were not revealed but the court stated, in describing it for identification in the record, that the first dat was July 31 and the last August 12.

With the diary in, 15 letters said to have been written by Mr. Hall to Mrs. Hall were admitted in evidence on the same basis.

"Same objection" snapped Robert H. McCarter as each letter was offered, with "admitted with an exception for the defense," the reply of Judge Parker.

The diary and letters were found in Mrs. Mills' home several weeks after her death and as published four years ago, contained terms of endearment.

James Mills, husband of the slain woman, testified in the present trial that he was paid $500 for the documents.

The defense received permission to examine the notebook and letters in detail in an ante-chamber during the day.

As the letters said to have been written by her husband were being delivered to defense attorneys, Mrs. Hall looked straight ahead. She sat as usual throughout the session with her assured composure.

Willie Stevens was his customary amiable self. There was one departure from the routine today. Heretofore the volunteer fireman has made his first act of the day a handshake for former Attorney General McCarter. Today Mr. McCarter went over and shook hands with Willie Stevens, who spent several minutes before court opening in jesting with members of defense counsel. Henry Stevens continued to look into space, seldom turning his head to the right or left, and indulging in practically no conversation.

Some time was occupied today in correcting the record on motion of defense. It was contended that several of the hundreds of exceptions made were being incorporated into the transcript and this matter was attended to. The day also brought bad news for Barbara Tough, the Scotch maid, who felt "mean" and "like a sneak" when she was forced yesterday to give the names of some of her fellow members of the guild who gossiped about Mrs. Hall and Mrs. Mills.

It was claimed by the defense that the official stenographers did not spell some of these names correctly and the suggestion was made by the court that the best way to get them properly entered in the record is to have the young woman who was a Presbyterian member of an Episcopal church organization, return to the standard and repeat them.

CHICAGO TO GREET QUEEN MARIE TODAY

CHICAGO, Nov. 13.—(AP)—Chicago donned its best today for Queen Marie, albeit somewhat self conscious about the endeavor to give Mid-West's truly democratic, midwest welcome.

The perplexity of city official wondering whether to kiss the royal visitor's hand or merely clasp it was disposed of by announcement that Queen Marie will hold her acknowledge of introduction, and most of the welcoming committee found some way out of the difficulties occasioned by the royal visitor's hour of the queen's arrival at 5:30 p. m.

The deadlock was broken, when some one submitted that "there is no such thing as precedence in Chicago—let's do it alphabetically"—and there was agreement.

MEXICO IS DRAWING UP NOTE REPLY

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 13.—(AP)—Announcement was made by Foreign Minister Saenz today that a reply was being drawn up to the note of Frank B. Kellogg the American Secretary of State, respecting the Mexican land and petroleum laws, to which the United States objects. Senor Saenz said the date on which the note would be forwarded to Washington had not been fixed.

The foreign minister added that the new note of Mr. Kellogg would be general new proposals of the American government, in addition to some already expressed in previous notes, and that the Mexican government is being forced to reply with its usual argument upholding the Mexican constitution, against which the protests of the American note refer.

RESIGNATION NOT ACCEPTED

PARIS, Nov. 13.—(AP)—M. Berenger, French ambassador to the United States, offered his resignation to Foreign Minister Briand a few days ago, it is learned, on the plea that his work in connection with the debt funding settlement was finished.

M. Briand refused to accept the resignation, and M. Berenger will soon return to Washington.

IMPORTANCE ATTACHED TO MEXICAN NOTE

Unusually Deep Cloak of Silence Serves To Accentuate Significance

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—(AP)—With Ambassador Sheffield a guest at the White House today the unusually deep cloak of silence with which state department officials surrounded the status of Mexican relations seemed only to accentuate the great significance they attach to the American note sent to Mexico City.

Although the communication was sent more than a week ago the state department has not yet admitted officially that it had gone forward, to say nothing of revealing what it contained. Even reports that it embraces a new ultimatum in connection with the oil and land law controversy, appear however, to be exaggerated.

There are indications that the communication is locked upon by the state department as of special significance than the two previous notes in the series, the last one from Mexico and one from the United States—have not been published. It could not be learned, from high officials of Secretary Kellogg and department officers, whether the latest communication differs only in language or embodies a new course in the prolonged argument.

DISMISS COMPLAINT AGAINST BARNES-AMES COMPANY OF NEW YORK

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—(AP)—Dismissal of a complaint charging the Barnes-Ames company of New York, and its subsidiary sales and shipping agent, the Barnes-Irwin Company of Philadelphia, with injuring the reputation of United States exporters by delivering inferior wheat to foreign buyers, was announced today by the Federal Trade Commission.

Beyond saying that dismissal was recommended by its counsel, the commission gave no explanation of its action, which was instituted two years ago when buyers had complained that they had paid for wheat of high quality but had received inferior grades.

WOLFORTS ROOST COUNTRY CLUB DESTROYED BY FIRE

ALBANY, Nov. 13.—(AP)—Wolforts Roost Country Club was virtually destroyed by fire today. The loss is estimated at $150,000.

Mrs. R. Fay, wife of the steward, who was ill in bed when the blaze started, was carried to safety. An effort by employees with three lines of hose and hand extinguishers failed. The cause of the fire is unknown.

Wolforts Roost was a three story frame and brick building with unusual architectural features. It was built by the late Joseph Emmett, noted actor and later became the home of the late David Hill, one time governor of the state, and United States senator who died there in 1910.

POTATO, BUCKWHEAT AND BEAN CROPS SUFFER AS RESULT OF WET WEATHER

The extremely wet weather during October has caused considerable damage to the potato, buckwheat, and bean crops of New York State according to the combined state and federal crop report for November issued from the New York State Department of Farms and Markets. In most instances the potato crop is nearly all dug and under cover by the end of October. This year, however, on account of the frequent and heavy rains during the entire month through the potato growing sections of the state a very large acreage remained unDug on November 1 outside of Long Island and northern New York. Another bad feature of the situation was the fact that many of the fields were too soft for the heavy potato harvesting machinery. Some growers were trying to get their crop out by hand. Others were working in the water soaked fields with their diggers doing the best they could between showers. Considerable rot was showing up in the wet lowlands and heavy soils but it was not serious on the lighter soils or on the high elevations. Before November 1, there had been no freeze to injure the tubers in the soil but the growers were in constant fear of freeze that might ruin a considerable portion of the unharvested crop. A few days of fairly warm drying weather would see a large number of potato fields cleared of the crop. The yields being obtained were reported to be fair in general and the tubers to be of good size and quality.

The 1926 crop of New York potatoes, including Long Island, is now estimated at 31,702,000 bushels. A year ago the crop amounted to 27,994,000 bushels and in 1924 to 43,460,000 bushels. Practically all of the potatoes in the other northern potato states appear to have been harvested. The total United States potato crop is now estimated at 360,727,000 bushels compared with 325,902,000 bushels last year and an average of 396,469,000 for the last five years.

The state crop of buckwheat is now estimated at 4,700,000 bushels. In 1925 a crop of 4,565,000 bushels was harvested. For the five years, the average size of the crop has been 4,325,000 bushels. On November 1, a very large percentage of the crop still remained in the field too wet to thresh. Some remained uncut. The United States crop of buckwheat is estimated at 15,249,000 bushels. In 1925, the crop amounted to 14,542,000 bushels and averaged 14,111,000 bushels during the past five years.

On November 1, it did not appear that the bean growers were in any more favorable position so far as harvesting their crop than they were in 1925. The bean harvest and the fall rains appear to have arrived at practically the same time each season. Reports indicated that about one-third of the beans were harvested and in the barns. The remainder was either pulled and bunched in the field where they were rotting or else were standing unharvested. Some of those bunched had been turned several times, but never got dry enough to be hauled to the barn. The white beans were reported to be staining badly. The "pick" per bushel will run high again this year. The bean crop can hardly help but be reduced below the earlier estimates on account of the large acreage being ruined by the wet weather at harvest time. Somewhat similar conditions seem to be holding true in Michigan where earlier the crop was reported to be only three-fourths as large as in 1925. Some acreage was being abandoned and the damage to the crop was reported heavy. Drouths and heavy winds have cut down Colorado's production to slightly more than one-half of the last year's production although the most of Colorado's beans are colored and lima beans.

The bean crop in California is slightly larger than a year ago but considerably more than one-half of California's beans are lima.

Clover seed production is on the decline in this state as well as over the entire country. For the past five years, the total United States crop has averaged 1,244,000 bushels. In 1925 it amounted to 1,029,000 bushels. This year however, the indicated production is only 864,000 bushels or about two-thirds of the five year average. The declining native clover seed crop is a severe handicap to those using the seed since several tests have shown that the home grown seed is much superior to the imported seed.

STATE DEPARTMENT OF FARMS AND MARKETS

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—(AP)—The undertone of the white potato market was a trifle weaker. Trading was extremely light. Supplies of hand at most terminals were heavy. Early morning jobbing sales on upstate bulk round whites were made at $4.50 @ $5.00 per 180 pounds. Maine Green Mountains realized $5.25 @ $5.50, rarely higher for the same quantity. The 1926 crop of New York potatoes, including Long Island, is now estimated at 31,702,000 bushels. A year ago the crop amounted to 23,994,000 bushels and in 1924 to 43,460,000 bushels. Practically all of the potatoes in the other northern potato growing states appear to have been harvested. The total United States potato crop is now estimated at 360,727,000 bushels compared with 325,902,000 bushels last year and an average of 396,469,000 for the last five years.

Receipts of barrelled apples were light. The market was a whole guiled dull except on strictly fancy fruit. At the Barclay street pier, grade A 2 1-2 inch Baldwins sold at $2.50 @ $3.50 per barrel and Rhode Island Greenings $3.00 @ $3.50. It is interesting to note that at the pier week ending November 6th, this state moved 961 cars of apples as against the shipment of 1,733 for the same week last season.

Supplies of state celery were limited. The demand was fair and the market steady on good stock. Fancy well blanched stock in the rough reached as high as $2.75 per two third crate. Concord grape values further strengthened. Arrivals were limited and the demand a trifle more active especially on fruit showing good quality and condition. Wholesale business on 127 quart Climax baskets was reported at 48 @ 52 1-2.

The market for state white cabbage was barely more than steady. Supplies were moderate but the outlet this morning was very limited. Danish type in bulk landed out on the basis of $22.00 @ $23.00 per ton. For the week ending November 6, New York forwarded 907 cars of cabbage to various consuming centers, bringing the total for the season up to 5,265 cars.

Radio Reception Conditions

At last a thoroughly enjoyable evening! The best in weeks. Programs are interesting, the volume control would maintain an even volume of had the volume necessary to overcome noise, and during the fading periods sound from the loud speaker. Distant stations were as strong as the near ones.

This is the sort of evening we used to have in past years. A decided prediction eighteen months of poor reception due to activity of sun spots during that time. Many hoped that reception conditions and sun spots are inversely. The predicted period of depression began more than a year ago and will end in 1928. However, this is only a theory, with a large amount of data to support it.

The unusual clearness of programs gave one an opportunity to observe the relative faithfulness of reproduction of the various stations. Any station can cover a wide band of notes in the middle of the musical scale, but for electrical reasons it is a big problem to design the transmitting apparatus to register and broadcast the low notes of the bass tuba, cello, bass viol and the high notes of the violin, etc.

WEAF, as would be expected, with their corps of telephone experts, appears to reproduce faithfully all notes of the musical scale. WJZ, WGY and WBAL are close seconds. But it takes a good receiver to benefit. The problem of retaining the very low and high notes is one in designing receivers as well as broadcasting stations.

This Evenings Program

Army-Notre Dame and Yale-Princeton in the East, and Ohio-Michigan in the West feature today's radio football game schedule. Not only will the plays be broadcast as they occur on the field, but the songs, cheers and shouts of the spectators will also be carried to the stay-at-homes through the ether. Station WEAF and WEEI will broadcast the Yale-Princeton affair, while WJZ, New York; WRC, Washington, and WGY, Schenectady, will carry the Army-Notre Dame contest. The Ohio-Michigan contest will be broadcast through station WEAR, Cleveland, Ohio. Other Interstate contests on the air today will be Pennsylvania vs. Columbia by WIP, Philadelphia; Harvard vs. Brown, by WBZ, Springfield, Mass.; Chicago vs. Northwestern, by WMAQ and WGN, Chicago; Minnesota vs. Butler by WCCO, Minneapolis-St. Paul; Kansas vs. Nebraska, by KFAB, Lincoln, Neb.; Drake vs. Ames, by WOI, Ames, Ia.; Wittenberg vs. Cincinnati, by WSAI, Cincinnati; Upsala vs. Manhattan, by WAAM, Newark; Washington vs. Columbia College by WOS, Jefferson City, Mo., and California vs. Nevada, by KPO, San Francisco.

Miss Margery Hamilton, a young American pianist, will be heard over WJZ as the third of the Students' Concerts of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, broadcast from stations WJZ, New York, and WRC, Washington, at 8:45 o'clock. William Mengelberg will conduct the program.

Just why North Dakota is the greatest state in the union will be told to radio listeners tonight from station WMAQ, Chicago, by Governor A. G. Sorlie of that state. His talk, at 8 o'clock is one of a series by governors of various states.

A drive to bring the vote of citizens of the District of Columbia will be instituted with a program broadcast from the Washington City Club, at 7:10 o'cock. Among the speakers will be Wallace O'Leary, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce; William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor; Representative Henry Rathbone and Senator William Borah.

A triple male quartet is the unusual musical organization which will be heard at 8:30 from station WHAS, Louisville, Ky., tonight. Mrs. Eugene A. Converse, Jr., is the director and accompanist of the quartet.

Walter Damrosch, famous leader of the New York Symphony Orchestra, will present a dramatic musical lecture-recital of Richard Wagner's "Valkyrie" at 9 o'clock from station WEAF, New York. The program will also be rebroadcast by WEEI, Boston; WFI, Philadelphia; WCAE, Pittsburgh; WWJ, Detroit; WSAI, Cincinnati; WTAM, Cleveland; KSD, St. Louis; WCCO, Minneapolis-St. Paul and WDAF, Kansas City.

FARM HAND FOUND DEAD AT GREENWOOD

HORNELL, Nov. 13.—Lloyd Tobias, 45 years old, a farm laborer, was found dead in the home of Thomas O'Hargan four miles south of Greenwood late last evening. Coroner M. G. Burch, who is investigating the affair, has issued a verdict of suicide.

Mr. and Mrs. O'Hargan left the farm about 6 o'clock in the evening to come to Hornell. Sometime later a relative came to the house and finding the door unlocked went in. He found Tobias' body in his room and a shotgun near. He immediately reported the matter to the authorities and the body was removed to Williams Undertaking Parlors in Canisteo. Coroner Burch will make known his decision today. Tobias was married.

Catches Fingers in Ensilage Machine, Lad Near Addison Has Two Fingers Amputated

ADDISON, Nov. 13.—Charles Whitmore, four year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Orman Whitmore, who reside on a farm on the east branch of the creek, met a painful accident Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock, when he caught his left hand in the slowly moving cogs of an ensilage cutter. Three fingers were badly mangled and finally the father had just shut off the engine and the cutter was running slowly at the time of the accident. Childlike, Charles put his hands on the cogs to see if he could stop them running. Having on mittens his fingers were rawn into the cogs, and for the hand was drawn in, it stopped the cogs revolving.

Mr. and Mrs. Whitmore and Charles Rice were present and after a period of ten minutes, the little child's hand was released. He was immediately taken to Addison to the office of Dr. Ralph Davis, and with the assistance of Dr. Whipple of Corning and Dr. Bigelow of Addison, the first two fingers of the left hand were amputated, and the third finger, which was badly crushed and lacerated was not taken off, but required several stitches to close the wound.

Antitoxin was administered to the child to safeguard against lock jaw. Although suffering considerable from pain and nervous shock, the child's condition was reported as favorable last evening.

Had the engine and cutter been running, the child's entire hand and arm would have been lost. The child was left-handed.

Allowance Voted Dr. Davis

At the November session of the Town Board an extra allowance of $100 was allowed Dr. Ralph Dr. "Alph Davis, local health officer, as a recompense for extra duties during the typhoid epidemic. While the amount does not fully repay Dr. Davis for time spent in tracing the epidemic, and for his assistance in other ways in connection with the emergency, the board saw fit to give him the extra money. It is the general opinion that the number of cases here was without doubt minimized by the alertness of Dr. Davis, who promptly traced the source of the epidemic to the local water supply.

Football an Old Sport

Football is the oldest of outdoor sports, says Lawrence White, of Claremont, Cal., Pomona College student who has conducted an exhaustive research into the origins of the pastime.

Digging into the Bible for football data White points out that Ezekiel wrote

"He will toss thee like a ball", indicating some form of the game existed as early as 750 B. C. Skipping ahead a few centuries the student finds one of the first official acts of Caesar Augustus was to demand a revision of the rules of a football game which the Romans had learned from the Greeks. Augustus decreed the game was too effeminate after men accustomed to slaughter their foes with the short sword.

By 1650 football was regarded as a national institution in England. It was played in American colleges as early as 1820. The first intercollegiate game was played in 1869 between Princeton and Rutgers.

Half-Soling Streets

The results obtained from reckless expenditures and well-considered expenditures, are the same in public affairs as in private affairs, namely, a burden of debts and obligations, or financial independence.

In no public expenditure is visible waste so conspicuous as in street and road building.

Thousands of dollars per mile will be expended on a highway or street over a period of years, hastened on its rock, gravel or surfacing: it with brick, stone blocks or cement.

When traffic conditions become such that a better type of roadway is essential, it is too often the practice to build the old foundation entirely, resulting in a complete waste of the old materials and well-compacted base. This practice is on a par with the individual who throws away a good pair of shoes just because they need a new wearing surface in the shape of a half-sole.

By use of modern road machinery, this type of work can be done quickly and with little inconvenience to traveling public, and at a great saving to taxpayers.

Joseph G. Cannon

Time scarcely had touched with silver the thin locks of Joseph Gurney Cannon years ago, era the nation had rechristened him "Uncle Joe". And never that title, confirmed by millions who never saw him yet knew every line of his worn, face and every whimsical trait of his intense personality, "Uncle Joe" came at last to end his career as elder statesman of the nation, the man of longest service in the congress; the object of honors among his colleagues that took no thought of party or political differences.

In the musty files of the Congressional Record there stands written a moving tale of this man's great service. It begins back in 1873 when first he came out of Illinois to take his seat in the house, even then a picturesque, free-eating political gladiator to whom the sword of debate and the tense intimacy of committee were the breath of life.

The yellowed pages show day by day how the hot blood of youth drove him into every affray, his tongue lashing out at his opponents, his quick mind formulating at call the instant expedients that are the weapons of political combat.

Month by month he climbed toward leadership growing more knowing as each session brought its new conflicts, hardening with time into the forceful, relentless champion of his party until that day when the gavel was placed in his hands and he mounted the speakers rostrum as master of the house to rule alone for two terms as few men before him had ruled that body.

"Uncle Joe" was then a veteran in the heyday of his power, but from the day he stepped up from the floor, the records are strangely lacking in something of the whimsical touch his personality had lent to debate. Around him had gathered a lore of tales, some true, some false, but all picturesque as the man himself was picturesque, and through the news columns and cartoons his personality had been stamped forever on the minds of men all over the land.

As all great had grown his place and power, great was his fall when the House in 1912 revolted against his Czar-like rule and stripped him of power through a combination of insurgents in his own party with the Democratic minority. Even then, however, when the battle in the House reached a pitch of excitement that swept every other happening in the world into the background for all Americans, "Uncle Joe," fighting with grim courage to the last, was to know something of the feeling men would have for him later. The triumphant rebels of the House refused to take the last step and oust him from the speakership. Content with stripping the rest of its power, they voted to hold him still in place.

In the political deluge that fell upon his party that year, "Uncle Joe" failed of reelection for the only time in his congressional career. For one term he was gone from the House, but practiced law in Dansville. When he came back again at the next election, age had begun to cool his ardor. He sat many days without sharing in debate and it was only in flashes that his old fire showed when he took the floor.

But never to the last was he in doubt as to the hearing the House would give him, never did he fail of a full audience among his colleagues and of deep interest in his remarks.

Born in a little Quaker settlement near Guilford, N. C., May 7, 1836 and named for Joseph Gurney, a famous Quaker, Mr. Cannon often remarked that he seemed to have drifted away from the faith and habits of the pious people whom Gurney led. For he was a fiery and rough and tumble fighter always. On the floor he fought with whirling arms and contortions of his body to drive home his words.

In one exciting battle, the late Champ Clark, raising on the Democratic side, dubbed him "The Dancing Dervish of Dansville" and brought down upon his head the wrath of "Uncle Joe." Once, in the heat of debate, Mr. Clark said he saw Mr. Cannon do a trick—not duplicated by a speaker since the confusion of tongues at Babel—make a complete circle on his heel.

"Uncle Joe" smoked incessantly, a cigar tilted sharply upward toward his hat brim and cartoonists never failed to draw him that way. But however long and black his cheroot may have been half a mouthful was generally enough to mutilate cruelly in later years. Often as a box of cigars under his arm, he would amble, in characteristic loose-jointed stride into a tobacco shop and survey the black ones a friend had given him for something not quite so strong.

In the same way Mr. Cannon always smiled when reporters exaggerated stories about his swearing and gambling. Lampooned from one end of the country to the other, he merely shrugged his drooping shoulders and went back at night to the game. Other players, watching his face, could not possibly read his expression whether he held four aces of four spades and a heart.

"Raising the tariff in the afternoon and the ante at night" was his favorite pet remark, when asked how he killed time.

Because he never rushed to deny remarks attributed to him, he came to be a rich source on whom some reporters drew for imaginary interviews through which there fan a biting sarcasm and a streak of lurid words. During the World War somebody wrote that Mr. Cannon had said the army officers in Washington were spurs to keep their feet from slipping. At War Department desks, Hundreds of officers were bitter in denouncing the former speaker, but he never denied it—he just smiled and gave his cigar a different tilt. Of course he never said it. It was merely an illustration of putting [illegible] words in [illegible] mouth.

HOLDS $30 BILL ISSUED IN 1778; LEGAL TENDER

A bona fide $30 bill is held by Bernard L. Hoppe of New Britain, Conn. Local banking houses pronounced it authentic, and Hoppe has refused many times its face value. The note, dated September 26, 1778 and signed by "A Lawrence, Secretary of the United States Treasury," is numbered 217,365. It is about one-fourth the size of [illegible] bills. Bankers say it is still legal tender.

SYNOPSIS

Molly is of the brood of "shiftless Shannons," a Texas family that has increased much too rapidly, but, unlike the okiers, she has temper, imagination and individuality. Her parents are poor and the advantages she enjoys are few, yet she leads her class at school and devours every book on which she can lay her hands. She pities her mother because of the drudgery of her life and "hates men, hates marrying, hates children."

She had no standards for distinguishing between a real gentleman and a counterfeit article. But even her dazzled, eager-to-be-deluded eyes could not overlook the fact that the sixteen-year-old heroine of the romance was more like to be sixty under her red and white—and that the mop of yellow curls had not originally grown where it now reposed. But that took little from her delirious joy.

A story made throbbing flesh and blood before her very eyes! It was beyond her wildest dreams. She had not really read "Hamlet" and "Othello" and "She Stoops to Conquer" at all. New and dirty realms opened before her. After that night of destiny, her own stories were transfigured. The wall opposite her bed in the old lean-to became the rear dimension for a stage set out with such reckless magnificence as even the nabobs in the profession can scarce afford. Thick folds of sombre velvet—these she instinctively preferred to the tawdry painted canvas—parted with slow and stately dignity. The footlights blazed from the cold blue of stars to the mellow gold of Indian summer moon, and — the play was on!

With all this teeming, intense life going on inside her, Molly had small cause to repine at the hard-

"I was over to the store an' Ollie Sears asked me to fetch you this—" ships of her lot. What was cotton-picking? What was scrubbing and baby-tending? What the disorderly, crowded house—what was Laws Chapel, when she had all this violent, secret happiness, sharpening at times to ecstasy that hurt? There were moments when she was so grateful for being and being herself that hot tears gushed up into her eyes and she lost all sense of time or space.

As that outward shell of herself which others perceived as Molly plodded along between the cotton rows, she was no longer conscious of the load at her shoulder, the ear-splitting monotony of the clamor of youthful noises behind her. She had darted off to where the sunset was letting down golden gates above the gray-black of the prairie. This was the hour of refreshment, the long rest and toll of the day, one of the hours when she belonged most wholly to herself—a passionate and fundamental need.

CHAPTER III.

"Molly —"

An eager voice behind her, a heavy-shod, masculine foot falling into step, shattered the trance of her mood, put to flight all the moment's sensuous rapture.

The intruder, a strapping, shy-eyed country boy, some five years her senior, quailed visibly before her inhospitable glance. Jo Blackburn was notoriously the most bashful boy in North Texas; yet he had courted Molly doggedly since she was seven. "We got through weighin' up earlier 'n usual over our way, an' I thought mebbe you'd let me carry your sack in to the wagon ..." His honest red face grew redder at a chorus of barely suppressed snickers behind him.

Molly shook her head and trampled on stolidly with the cotton sack dragging her down like a top-heavy prop on a stimlin arching pear tree. Luckily, poor Jo could not see the malicious gleam in her cornflower-blue eyes. It is the fate of rough and simple men to be thus flouted by women who succumb at a glance, a touch, to men less-scrupulous and worthy.

After the cotton was weighed up, they walked side by side down the dusk-fragrant "big road"—Molly listening in silence. Save for the part about the new house, she could have repeated every word by rote. When he finished at last on a small, unwanted burst of eloquence, the malicious gleam still sparkled in her eyes. "Jo," she said quietly, "you're good and kind, and I like you. But I wouldn't marry the Angel Gabriel, not if he had me a mansion built in the skies with clouds and thrones and waterpiped into the kitchen—and gold trumpets to call the hired men to dinner! I hate marrying. I hate men. I hate children"; she repeated slowly and fervently the cardinal tenets of her faith. "I don't mean I hate them at one time—the children—" She glanced ahead pendently at the silhouette of ragged, ill-kept brothers and sisters against the sunset. "I feel so sorry for them and so angry about them I could cry, sometimes."

They were at the rickety little back gate now. The children, ramped for supper, had gone on into the house. Jo was turning away, gloomy and dejected, when he shoved his hand suddenly into his coat denim pocket and brought out a crumpled envelope. "I pretty nigh forgot," he said. "I was over to the store an' Ollie Sears asked me to fetch you this——"

Molly leaned across the gate, which wished reproachfully on its single hinge, and took the letter. She raised it to her eyes, straining to make out the typewritten characters. Her fingers trembled. For a space her heart ceased to beat. Thus simply and casually do the "curious events" of life come to pass.

"Miss Molly Shannon, Lawl Chapel, Texas"—so the address read. And in the upper left-hand corner were the words, "Office of the Registrar, University of Texas." She jerked open the envelope, devoured the brief communication inside, while Jo watched her, mystified and uneasy, but little dreaming he had himself put into her hands the final instrument of his destruction.

My dear Miss Shannon [so the note ran],—We are happy to inform you your examination average was higher than that of any other candidate, and you have accordingly been awarded one of the—scholarships for rural schools.

As regards the details, we advise that you get in touch at once with Miss Brian, who has charge of this matter.

With heartiest congratulations, I am

Very truly yours,

Molly had forgotten Jo, forgotten his very existence. With some incoherent murmur, she closed the gate and started toward the house. When she saw that she was left alone, she halted, turned her eyes again to the darkening prairie at whose rim still lingered a faint afterglow of gold. She crushed the open sheet against her breast, lifted it to her lips. The empty cotton sack, slipped unnoted to the ground. Once more she was on her heavenkissed path. The golden gates had parted and she had her first dizzying glimpse of what was on the other side.....

Her mother, an indescribably pathetic, misshapen figure in a faded calico wrapper, stood over the sizzling hot cook stove. There was supper still to fry, another batch of biscuits to mix, dishes to wash, and simple men to be thus flouted by women who succumb at a glance, a touch, to men less-scrupulous and worthy.

BURGESS BEDTIME FOR SAT NO ONE TO PLAY WITH

'Tis only folk who work each day That ever know the joy of play. —Old Mother Nature.

Peter Rabbit, who has nothing to do but play, really never has known the real joy of play. Peter is always sorry for people who have to work, and people who have to work are always sorry for Peter. That is the way of the world. Peter thinks that working is a waste of time, but, of course, Peter is mistaken.

Every Fall, just on the edge of cold weather, Peter has a discontented spell. The only trouble is he has no one to play with. If he could play by himself, he would be all right. Very few people want to play by themselves. Most folks want somebody else to play with, and in this Peter is just like other folks. So it is that at this certain season of the year he has a period of discontent. Everybody he knows has either gone away, or is getting ready to go away, or is working to prepare for the coming Winter. Nobody wants to play. And not a few of Peter's friends turn up their noses at him because he finds nothing to do but play.

Peter delights to hang around where others are at work, so he spent a great deal of time over where the Squirrel cousins were working so hard to fill their storehouses, and were worrying while they worked. But Peter didn't worry. He didn't worry one teeny, weeny bit, yet he didn't have one mouthful of food saved up for Winter.

"What's the use" demanded Peter, when Rusty the Fox Squirrel wondered that Peter didn't worry at all. "What's the use? I've always come through the Winter somehow, and I guess I always will. Worrying is what I call borrowing trouble. I don't like to borrow anything, not even trouble."

"You'll worry all right when the ground is covered with snow and ice and you have nothing to eat," declared Rusty. "Then you'll wish you had stored up some food, the way I have. I won't have anything to worry about."

"Yes you will," chuckled Peter. "I know you. You'll be worrying just as you are now. You'll be worrying for fear your food won't last until the Winter is over. I never knew it to fail. People who worry can always find something to worry about. Now I am a happy-go-lucky."

Rusty chuckled. "I'll say you are," said he. "You are the most happy-go-lucky fellow of my acquaintance. But let me tell you something, Peter. Life wasn't intended to be all play."

"And it wasn't intended to be all work," interrupted Peter.

Rusty nodded his head. "Right, Peter, quite right," said he. "Do you know of anybody who plays any harder than my cousins and I do when it is time to play? Let me tell you something, Peter."

"Go ahead," said Peter good-naturedly, "I'm listening."

"You don't know the real fun of play."

Peter opened his eyes very wide. "What nonsense!" he exclaimed.

"No, it isn't nonsense," replied Rusty. "It is only those who have done honest work and have earned the right to play who know the real fun of play. Think it over, Peter. Now I've got some work to do and I can't waste any more time." With this away went Rusty to hunt for hickory nuts. Peter watched him for a few moments, then went to look for some one to play with. But though he looked and looked, he couldn't find any one else with nothing to do. So he became discontented and unhappy, while those who have work to do didn't have time to be unhappy.

In L'il Old New York

Where They Do Such Things and Say Such Things

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—(AP)—The aged watchmen who held forth at the entrance of buildings under construction in the metropolis appear none too robust. One of their principal duties to the clear the way for workmen and the trucks that bring materials to haul away debris. This they do with an authoritative air.

THE GUARDIANS of stage doors, on the other hand, are capable appearing men of mien that hardly would be classed as gentle. Some of them remind one of the typical detective type of the movies.

SCENE ON Broadway: A sandwich man, hunger showing in his countenance, dropping forlornly at a corner, the advertising sign hanging somewhat askew from his narrow shoulders. Across the street a thin, stoic-faced old woman, seated on a box, a carton of mints in her lap, and seemingly too tired to care whether anyone stopped to buy a roll of the confection.

WHEEZES ABOUT men waiting on street corners for women friends or relatives are common. But in New York some women wait at theatres for their escorts. About curtain-raising time, several usually may be seen waiting in lobbies for their delayed men companions.

A FRUIT peddler in Columbus Circle had a sign on his handcart reading, "Belgun Grapes, 15c pound". Two other peddlers came along with carts heaped high with grapes, priced at ten cents a pound, and established themselves opposite the first arrival. The latter, faced with such serious competition, hastily obtained a scrap of paper, marked it with a large "0" and pinned it over the "5" of his original sign.

AS A MEANS of bolstering their rather slender pensions, many retired firemen and policemen of New York work as extras. The casting director at the Paramount Long Island studio has the names of 150 such men.

In the News

CHICAGO—While some eastern papers favor abolishing football because of the Harvard-Princeton dispute, here are the views of Commissioner Griffith of the Western Conference about the game: "It needs sportsmanship. It teaches a quarter of a million young men every week how to take a licking."

WEST POINT—Perhaps some of the boys at the military academy wish that Queen Maris could visit them again in order that they might attend the Army-Navy game. Anyhow it, turns out that when she reviewed the cadet corps all punishment for minor offenses was wiped out, in accordance with the academy's custom.

NEW YORK.—Masterpieces on the installment plan next. The Society of Independent Artists is to try the plan at its forthcoming exhibition.

PHILADELPHIA— The girls may take note now that Harry Riloff has luxuriant hair in place of a bald head. In a trolley accident he got a shining pate. The hair grew again after he went to 13 doctors and a masseur. Suing the traction company he said in court that the baldness was annoying because he might want to get married. A jury awarded him $150.

NEW YORK—William S. Leeds, 24, who inherited $40,000,000 from the tinplate king, is out to make a fortune of his own with clam juice. For three months he experimented and now society is flocking to a food how to try the drink.

MILLER HOME TO RECOVER

Mr. Miller who is a prominent athlete plays right half on the Freshman football team and it was during the game with Cortland High School, the feature contest of the season, that he was injured. The injury of their star half lost the game for the Frosh as the substitute that replaced him; fumbled a punt a few minutes later and the high school recovered the ball and took it across the line for the winning touchdown.

This is Mr. Miller's first year on the eleven as he never played football with high school. He has been one of the stars of the Freshman team and will undoubtedly make the varsity next season. He was prominent in athletics while a student at N. H. S., being a member of the basketball and track teams and a star pitcher on the nine.

REPORT POST CARD NUISANCE

Many People Receiving Cards In Manner Similiar to Neckties

A number of Corning people have reported that they are already commencing to be bothered by the "Christmas card nuisance." Many residents have received packages of post cards from manufacturers with the request that a certain amount of money be forwarded to the factory or the cards returned.

Many time a year certain articles, paying the return postage while others do not and in a few days receive the first of a series of letters, asking for the money to be sent, later demanding it and finally the recipient is notified that if the cards are not paid for the matter will be placed in an attorney's hands.

The cards are generally not wanted but the average business man does not have the time or desire to waste the money to return them. The cards are generally accepted from the postman however, because one does not know what else to do. The easiest way to dispose of the nuisance, one man said, is to return the package to the Post Office Department, which will notify the manufacturer, who will be required to pay the postage if the cards are not desired returned.

This system has been used by several necktie concerns and the city was recently flooded with this kind of merchandise.

MRS. M'CAULEY HOSTESS AT TWO BRIDGE PARTIES

Mrs. George V. McCauley was hostess at two bridge parties at her home Thursday afternoon. She entertained with three tables of bridge, followed by dainty refreshments. Mrs. Gordon M. Ridenour and Mrs. R. G. Sherwood were awarded score favors.

Bates, Mrs. Stacie Oldfield, Mrs. W. B. Gore, Mrs. R. G. Sherwood, Mrs. J. T. Littleson, Mrs. O. A. Gage, Mrs. H. Phillips, Jr.

Mrs. H. P. Hood, Mrs. O. W. Hilbert, Mrs. D. H. Young, Mrs. R. A. Blunt, Miss Alma Beard, Miss A. Young, Mrs. A. M. Thetard, Mrs. J. W. Lynahan, Mrs. Albert T. St. Clair, Mrs. W. W. Oakley, Miss Florence Moran and Mrs. J. W. Shea.

BRINGS ACTION AGAINST LACKAWANNA RAILROAD

A Supreme Court action has been brought by W. F. Knapp, of Bath, as attorney for John Carroll of Corning, against the Lackawanna railroad, the action seeks damages because of injuries alleged to have been suffered by the plaintiff through alleged negligence of the defendant.

Mr. Carroll in his complaint recites that working as a track laborer for the defendants, he was severely injured, when a piece of iron, loosened from a car in a passing train, flew and struck him on the head.

Deaths-Funerals

Margaret Dorothy Jack.

The funeral of Margaret Dorothy Jack was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Jack, 185 Chemung street. Dr. E. J. Stuart, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, officiated. Interment was in Hope Cemetery.

The bearers were Margaret Sproul, Rachael Sproul, Ruth McLain and Dernice Casterline.

TOTAL OF $53,000 IS GIVEN FOR CHEST BY OVER 3,000 PEOPLE

Sum is Greater by $4,000 Than in Last Campaign But About $2,000 Under the Quota

The Community Chest Campaign officially closed last night, with a total of $53,000 subscribed by almost 3,000 people of Corning and Painted Post. This sum is greater by $4,000 than was pledged for 18 months in the last campaign. At 6 o'clock, E. B. Gore, who audited the returns, announced the final results. The last days clean-up brought in subscriptions from people who had not been seen before and who came to the office in order that they might be counted. Although the campaign is officially closed, there are a great number of people who were not reached. Those will be given the opportunity of adding their names to the list.

W. H. Curtiss, president of the chest, in reviewing the past week's work said: "This campaign has certainly shown that the citizens of Corning and Painted Post have the wonderful spirit which we counted on. In the last campaign there were 930 subscribers. Tonight finds us with almost 3,000, which puts Corning and Painted Post in their rightful place in the list of Community Chest cities. This has been a remarkable campaign and I want to thank the people for their response. The effectiveness with which the campaign was carried on more than justifies the small fee which was paid to the American City Bureau.

Mr. Wilson, campaign director, has demonstrated to us that technical experience in fund raising campaigns is an essential part of arousing the general public. He has worked with all our local committees in a thoroughly harmonious way and has helped the board and general committee to pave the way for a much improved spirit in regard to later Community Chests. We are now ready to go ahead with a constructive Community Chest program."

Marvin Olcott, general chairman of the campaign, expressed himself as delighted with the results. Mr. Olcott said: "The spirit that was shown in this campaign has been wonderful. I didn't think that it was possible to get so many men together who would give up their private businesses to work in a community effort. I am certainly pleased with the result."

The office work of the Community Chest will be carried on at the Chamber of Commerce. The fund will be budgeted as follows: The Red Cross, 2 per cent; Boy Scouts, 5 per cent; Hospital, 58 per cent; Girl Scouts, 2 per cent; Salvation Army, 7 per cent; Social Service Societies of Corning and Painted Post, 19 per cent, Y. M. C. A., 4 per cent. The officers and directors of the chest will handle the disbursement of the fund.

DENTAL ASSOCIATION MEETS AT COUNTY SEAT

Members of the dental profession in Corning were in Bath Thursday evening to attend a regular monthly meeting of the Steuben County Dental Association. The dinner was held at the Hotel Wagner followed by a clinic during which Dr. David Beier of Buffalo gave a lecture on the subject of "Crown and Bridge."

Those present from Corning were Dr. C. F. Buckland, Dr. H. W. Lawrence, Dr. G. F. Snowden, Dr. A. M. Hewitt, Dr. K. W. Phillips, Dr. L. B. Elliott and Dr. F. C. Clary.

A. M. There were 250 Royal Arch members present to welcome the visiting official. Following the lodge session a luncheon was served.

AUTO TIRE STOLEN

A second report of an automobile tire being stolen last night was made to the police this afternoon. D. W. Strait, of 262 Walnut street reported that the spare tire was taken from his machine while the car was parked on the Pine street bridge yesterday sometime.

MR. COMOSH IS HOME

John Comosh, of West Fifth street, who has been undergoing treatment at Corning Hospital for the past several weeks was able to return to his home today.

PARENTS OF SON

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lyons, of 265 East Market street, at Corning Hospital today.

Over 70 Years Before His Birth Is Recorded

Born at Coopers Plains more than 70 years ago, Arthur Nowels Sanderson, now of Buffalo, did not have his birth recorded until last month. Mr. Sanderson was born October 8, 1856, the son of the Rev. and Mrs. Perley P. Sanderson, but not until nearly three-quarters of a century later was his birth placed on file at Painted Post.

Mr. Sanderson is a trusted employe of the New York Central Railroad and by reason of his 70 years and term of service is eligible for a pension but first it was necessary for him to establish the fact that he had passed through the three score and 10 seasons on this earth, and as a result of his birth has just been placed on record with Clerk Glenn F. Luckey. It was not necessary to report births to the state 70 years ago.

NO DEATHS IN ERWIN TOWN

Report of Clerk Luckey Shows Four Births and Three Marriages in Month

The report of Town Clerk Glenn F. Luckey for the month of October shows that there has been four births and three marriage licenses, 174 hunting and fishing licenses issued and that there has been no deaths in the village.

A son, James Reuben, was born October 13 to Mr. and Mrs. James R. Phillips, of Coraing, R. D. 1.

A son, Richard La Vern, was born October 3 to Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Cornell, of R. D. 1.

A son, Floyd, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Floyd J. Hall of Coopers Plains.

A daughter, Clara Louise, was born October 16 to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Smitzyman of South Hamilton street.

Miss Ruth Louise Chatterton, of Wellsboro, and William Glenn Purdy, of Painted Post were united in marriage at Painted Post October 11 by Justice of the Peace Willis J. Masters.

Miss Helen Leona Stanton, of Gang Mills, and Edward Charles Allyn, of Dunbar street, Corning, were married October 20 at Caton by the Rev. Edwin Porter Van Deventer, pastor of the Baptist Church.

Miss Elizabeth Foster of 124 Chemung street and Devillo Carter Wright of Bath were married October 23 at Campbell by the Rev. Francis Smith.

Five delinquent dog owners complied with the law and paid their taxes. No non-resident hunting and fishing licenses were issued.

PAINTED POST

Athletic Teams Dine

About 30 members of Painted Post High School athletic teams and prominent sport fans and supporters attended a banquet held last evening at the Painted Post High School at which George W. Pratt, of Corning, delivered a very interesting talk on athletics in general.

Judson Hulburt, athletic director and physical training instructor, spoke briefly on "Sportsmanship" and the coming basketball season at the high school. Roy Stage, captain of the football team, also made a few appropriate remarks followed by short talks by F. L. Marrin, representing the board of Education and Earl B. Elmore, principal.

The banquet was served at 7:30 o'clock by the girls of the home economics department and a great deal of credit is due them and their instructor Miss Louise Barnard.

Car Leaves The Track

Residents of Painted Post who depend upon the Corning Water Painted Post street railway for transportation were greatly hampered Thursday afternoon when a spread in the rails of the west-bound car in charge of Motorman Ernest Burris of the track at the head of Townsend avenue on Riverside and tied up the line for several hours.

It was necessary to get a special crew of men from the car barns in South Corning before the car could be put back on the track and those transiting between the city and the village had to walk nearly a mile.

New Machine Helps

The new canceling machine which has been placed in the Post Office at Painted Post has been found to greatly speed up the work of postmarking the first class mail. A large number of letters can be checked at the same time as the machine is self feeding and the matter can be easily disposed of in a few minutes. Allen C. Badger is in charge of this work.

Student Salesmen Leave

The student salesmen who have been located at the Ingersoll Rand plant at Painted Post for the past few months left yesterday morning for Easton and Athens, Pa., where they will resume their studies.

Robert LaFollette, Notre Dame graduate and former football player, who has been a member of the All-High grid team during his stay here, was among the group of students sent to Easton.

Chatauqua Is Planned

Floyd C. Hubbard, a member of the Painted Force at Painted Post, has received posters and tickets for the chatauqua which is to be held at Painted Post November 25-28 and it will be possible to obtain tickets from him.

REPRESENTED SOCIETY AT ST. LOUIS MEETING

Miss Ruth Hausner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Hausner of East Third street, has been in St. Louis, Mo., for past week at St. Louis, Mo., where she represented Cornell University at the national convention of the Mortar Board Society. Miss Hausner was vice-president of the Senior Class at Cornell University, is president of the Cornell branch of the Mortar Board.

Stamps on Display

Postmaster John L. Chatfield attended a meeting of stamp collectors held Friday evening at Vestal at which his collection of more than 10,000 stamps of United States and foreign countries was disaplyed. This collection is one of the most valuable in this part of the state.

—Gesta Olsen, Benson Bailey and Clark Conrad of Painted Post were visiting friends in Tioga, Pa., Friday evening.

Chest Campaign Over; Awakened Much Interest

The annual campaign of Corning and Painted Post Community Chest is over. While the final result falls somewhat short of the goal, the general interest awakened in the campaign, the increased number of subscribers and the splendid cooperation of the various committees and teams all point to an encouraging growth of community spirit.

Even with as thorough an organization as we have had this year, many people who would like to contribute to the Chest have not been reached by the solicitors. All such are urged to mail or bring their subscriptions promptly to the Chamber of Commerce office. Pledge blanks may be signed there. A general response to this appeal will go far toward wiping out the shortage in the campaign total.

CORNING COUNCIL HAS PART IN SUBSCRIPTION

Corning Council, Knights of Columbus, is asked to contribute $770 of the Million Dollar Fund being raised by the Knights of Columbus in the United States and Canada to aid Mexican Catholics.

A communication addressed to members of the Council states in part: "Some of the money will be used when necessary in Mexico to care for dependent children and adults in Catholic institutions. A great part of it will be used to counteract the false propaganda that is being circulated in this country about true condition sin Mexico.

"The American people are fair-minded and when they know the real facts about the sinfulous persecution in Mexico, their sympathies and efforts will be on the side of fair play."

MARRIAGES

Adsit-Dillenbeck

Miss Rhea B. Adsit, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. T. Adsit, of West Pulteney street, and Raymond H. Dillenbeck, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Dillenbeck of East Second street, were united in marriage this morning at 7 o'clock at a quiet ceremony at the home of the bride's parents.

Dr. U. G. Warren, pastor of the First Congregational church, performed the ceremony in the presence of the immediate families of the couple.

Following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Dillenbeck left for Syracuse. Upon their return, they will make their home with the groom's parents temporarily.

Mrs. Dillenbeck attended Northside High School. She is a very popular member of the younger set. Mr. Dillenbeck was graduated from Corning Free Academy in the class of '26. At present he is employed by the New York Central Railroad Company.

MISS DARRIN GIVES TALK

Well Known Lecturer Speaks At Woman's Club On Current Events

Miss Katherine E. Darrin was heard in another interesting lecture at the club rooms of Corning Woman's Club Friday morning. Coming as the day did, immediately following Armistice Day, Miss Darrin dealt somewhat at length on the celebrations of the day.

She also referred to the statement made by a senator that the graves of American soldiers in France were being desecrated and stated that this had been proven to be false upon investigation.

Miss Darrin then discussed the recent elections and conditions in Italy and in China. She also mentioned the Hall-Mills case in New Jersey, the Aimee Semple MacPherson case in California, and the murder case in Texas, pointing out that in each case people officially connected with the church had been involved and that the cloth had suffered a certain lowering of respect for it to some quarters through these cases.

ST. PATRICK'S PLAY TO BE GIVEN MONDAY NIGHT

Final rehearsals of "Welcome Home, Jimmy," the three-act play, which St. Patrick's Dramatic Club will present in the Assembly Hall of the church Monday and Tuesday evenings at 8 o'clock promise everything of respect for it to satisfy the critics that the play will be well presented and will uphold the reputation of the club.

Plenty of action, laughable line and clever skits between the acts will help the audience to have an enjoyable evening.

The sale of tickets indicates the usually large attendance and the players are making their best efforts to present a production which will not only satisfy the audience but gain further renown for the dramatic club.

Church Activities in Corning and Painted Post Coming Week

GENESEO DISTRICT MEETING SCHEDULED FOR POST CHURCH; ROGER MURPHY TO SING SUNDAY

Conferences are still holding an important place in the curriculum of different churches. The Steuben County Christian Endeavor League held a conference in the Congregation yesterday and this afternoon. About 300 attended the conference and some very good speakers were heard.

The Rev. Erling L. Edwardsen, pastor of the Norwegian Church, and about 30 members of the Epworth League are attending a meeting with the American Scandinavian League in Buffalo this week-end.

The Corning District Geneseo Conference will be held at the Painted Post Methodist Church Tuesday with the Rev. W. M. Young, D. D., District Superintendent, of Hornell, presiding.

Sunday afternoon the First Presbyterian Church will observe its annual organ Vesper Service Sunday as it has done in the past by having a noted organist, George Daland and a violinist, Miss Ruth Stanton.

Roger Murphy, formerly of Corning, will sing at the First Baptist Church Sunday evening.

Corning Council, Knights of Columbus, will go to communion in a body at the 8:30 o'clock mass tomorrow morning, being attended by the Fourth Degree Knights in uniform as a guard of honor. Following the mass breakfast will be served at the Ross & Krowl restaurant.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR SOCIETY OF STEUBEN HOLDS MEETINGS AT CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

The annual convention of the Steuben County Christian Union opened at the First Congregational Church of this city yesterday afternoon, when the 115 Christian Endeavor workers were present.

The program opened about 5:45 o'clock with the devotional service led by Dr. U. G. Warren, pastor of the First Congregational Church of Corning. At this time, Charles D. Lord, of Addison, offered the opening prayer of the sessions. Miss Velva Lamb of First Congregational Church, Corning, was pianist at this service.

Bennett Stewart of Corning, president of the County Union, extended a welcome to the delegates in the name of Corning and in the name of the First Congregational Church of Corning. At this time the delegates were told a few generous facts about the city.

Mr. Stewart introduced H. Earle Howe, of Syracuse, the New York State Christian Endeavor treasurer, who spoke on "Effective Leadership." In his talk he said, in part, "It is the tendency of human nature to follow the younger follow the older; the weaker follow the stronger. It is very important to select the right kind of leader—uprightness, strong, courageous, Christian, rather than cheap and gaudy—if one would make a success of life. The cheap, gaudy type turns to the younger people, who will give him the praise they crave, and flatter their vanities for followers because they know that they could find no followers among the older people.

"No one could choose a better leader than Christ. He sets the highest possible standard and the only guide you through life in this world but will lead you to a higher and better life in the next world.

"The older people have a great responsibility because they are the ones which the youth choose as examples.

"In every life—educational, church, business and political—there is a lack of true leaders. There are many who aspire to leadership but did not know how to go about it to attain it.

"Success, leadership, courage, hard work and perseverance are needed. The hardships and trials of today are fitting us and preparing history of tomorrow, although often we fail to perceive it. The Christian Endeavorer gives a very thorough training for such a life."

Mr. Howe cited many instances of nationally, even internationally known men of the 115 Christian Endeavorers, church and sports world who were Christian Endeavorers. He stated Christian Endeavor gives young people a training which is valuable in any vocation and gives them a training in following Christ.

He urged the adults present to encourage Christian Endeavor for the sake of the Church and of the community.

The meeting was then adjourned for the banquet in the church dining hall. Under the direction of Miss Dorothy McCabe, the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Congregational Church had artistically decorated the hall in a color scheme of red and white, the Christian Endeavor colors.

The yells were immediately started by the delegation from the Bath Presbyterian Church who let people know who they were and where they were from.

Among the notable yells and songs were the much appreciated songs by the Shortsville delegation; a school song by the members of Naples High School who were present and the immediate response by the Corning Free Academy students with their school song.

The program under the direction of Toastmaster Mason Bowers, was:

Bennett Stewart, Corning, Invitation to delegates to remain for Saturday's sessions; Dr. U. G. Warren, Corning, short speech; Miss Velva Lamb, First Congregational Church, Corning, "Corning's Welcome."; Anabel Coats, Presbyterian Church, Bath; "Response to Address of Welcome"; Remarks from the new ministers of the county: The Rev. M. J. Maynard, Avoca; the Rev. Carl J. Grabb, Presbyterian Church, Painted Post; Tribute to the Rev. Guy Bleakney of the First Baptist Church, who has been a faithful attendant of the county officers. Dr. Warren welcomed the delegates in the name of Corning and in the name of the First Congregational Church of Corning. At this time the delegates were told a few generous facts about the city.

Noted Musician to be Heard in Vesper Service

MISS RUTH STANTON

GEORGE DALAND

ORGANIST AND VIOLINIST AT PRESBYTERIAN TOMORROW IN BEAUTIFUL VESPER SERVICE

Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock a Vesper Organ service will be given at First Presbyterian Church to which the public is invited.

The service is given annually in order that the beautiful organ installed in that church may be heard in recital with a noted organist at the keyboard. The service has been fixed for an hour which will not conflict with others and should attract a large audience.

The concert organist this year will be George Daland, at present director of the organ and theoretical departments of Ithaca Conservatory of music, former solo organist of Cornell University and former organist and choirmaster of St. Mary's Brooklyn, St. Peter's Philadelphia; St. Clement's, El Paso, Texas, and St. John's (Georgetown) Washington, D. C.

Mr. Daland who is a pupil of Dudley Buck also of Edward Hopkins of London, has given successful recitals in most of the important cities of this country.

He is a leading organist and has a repertoire of several hundred concert pieces for the organ.

Mr. Daland will be assisted by Miss Ruth Stanton, concert violinist, formerly head of the violin departments of Alabama State College and of Huron College of South Dakota and now of Ithaca Conservatory of Music.

Miss Stanton is a Corning girl, the daughter of Mrs. J. I. Stanton, of this city, and sister of Mrs. S. K. Wolcott and John Stanton of Corning.

Miss Stanton is recognized as one of the best of the younger group of violinists who are gaining in reputation yearly. She has not before been heard in Corning.

The program to be rendered Sunday is as follows:

ORGAN—Overture, Martha (Flotow); Fugue in D major (Gullmant); March Hi-Ho from French Overture in B minor (Bach); Lullaby (Wagner); Turkish March from the Ruins of Athens (Beethoven-Rubinstein).

VIOLIN—Romance, from Concerto in D minor—op.22 (Wieniawski).

ORGAN—On the coast (Tone Picture), Dudley Buck; My Sweet Repose (Schubert); Moment Musical (Schubert); Scherzo Caprice (Charles Gilbert Spross).

VIOLIN—Andante Cantabile, op 11, Tschaikowsky (Transcribed by Leopold Auer from the String Quartette).

ORGAN—Two Mexican Songs; Estrellita (Ponce); La Golondrina (Serradell). La Golondrina is a great favorite in Mexico and has been called the Mexican Home Sweet Home. Gavotte in A major, from Iphigenia in Aulis (Gluck); Coronation March from Le Prophete (Meyerbeer).

Your Sunday School Lesson

CALEB'S FAITHFULNESS REWARDED

Lesson Text—Josh. 14:6-16

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 14, 1926.

Copyright 1926 By The Evening Leader.

GOLDEN TEXT—I wholly followed the Lord my God.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Brave Spy Rewarded.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Reward of Service.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Caleb, the Courageous.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Blessings That Follow Whole-hearted Obedience.

I. Elements of Caleb's Character.

1. Independence of spirit (Num 13:30).

Though the multitude clamored to follow the report of the ten, Caleb determined to stand alone. This is an element in human character which is highly important. One should s nd for what he knows to be right, regardless of the sentiment of the crowd.

2. True to convictions (Josh. 14:6, cf. Num. 14:6-9).

What Caleb knew and felt he spoke out. He did not wait for the opinion of others and then modify his to suit the populace. A true man and one who can be trusted will be loyal to his convictions.

Organ Recital

by

GEORGE DALAND

Assisted by

RUTH STANTON, Violinist

Sunday Afternoon

November 14, 1926

4 o'Clock

The Public is Cordially Invited to Attend This Recital

3. Unselfish (14:12).

He did not ask for some easy place. He did not wish to thrust someone else into the place of difficulty. He wanted to go into the place where it would require fighting in order to drive out the giants which were in the land.

4. Courageous (Josh. 14:12, cf. 13:30).

This courage he displayed when he insisted that they were able to go up from Kadesh-Barnea and take possession of the land. Forty-five years have elapsed since that time. He would be considered an old man now, but still he desired that place for an inheritance

II. Caleb Laying Claim to His War.

1. Loyalty to God (Josh. 14:8, cf. Num. 14:24).

which would require some fighting. He said, "I am as strong this day as I was in the day that Moses sent me: as my strength was then, even so is my strength now for inheritance (vv. 6-12).

Loyalty does not come alone to make his claim. He came in the presence of the children of Judah, but he be suspicioned of taking advantage. He did not wish to wait until after the lot was cast, for God had already given a certain portion to him. It was unnecessary to ask God to decide a matter which He had already determined. The basis of his plea was:

I. The ground of his services (vv. 6-8).

He had endangered his life in spying out the land—had gone to Hebron when the giants were there. He brought back a true report, which was faithful to serve all against him. He bore his testimony and insisted that they go up and take the land though to do so incurred the displeasure of his brethren and necessitated his standing practically alone.

II. The grounds of the oath of Moses to him (v. 9).

Joshua had respect for Moses, and was bound to follow the counsel of his faithful servant to him. he had succeeded. This plea was effective.

III. The ground of God's providential dealing with him (vv. 10-12).

God had preserved him in bodily health. Though he was now eighty-five years old, his natural vigor was not abated. He said, "I am as strong this day as I was in the day that Moses sent me, as my strength was then even so is my strength now for war."

III. Joshua Giving the Inheritance to Caleb (13:14, 15).

1. Joshua's Blessing (v. 13).

He not only acquiesced in Caleb's claim but bestowed the blessing of God upon him in it.

2. The Inheritance given (vv. 13, 14).

Hebron was the name of the inheritance by the name Hebron means fellowship, and it was given because Caleb had fully followed the Lord. Only those who fully follow the Lord can enjoy fellowship with Him. Though Caleb now legally possessed Hebron, it was necessary for him to fight to drive out the giants and to be settled it. In Christ we have an inheritance which God has given us. We, too, must fight them; for the enemy is unwilling to relinquish his claim upon it.

BELIEVING IN CHRIST

Many men do not believe in Christ because they do not want to do what Christ demands of them. Others do not get intellectual, as they pretend, but practical. They deny Christ so as to escape obligation and effort.

Young People.

PRAYING FOR OTHERS

I have been benefited by praying for others; for by making an errand to God for them I have gotten something for myself.—Rutherford.

The Lure of the Majestic Northwest

A COMPLETE PICTURE STORY A WEEK

Even Father John keeps the real reason for Roger's absence from Valencia, believing that McKay will spend the rest of his life in jail. The kindly priest offers no objection, under the circumstances, when Harland suggests Valencia go to New York with him and enter one of his shows. The priest fails to realize the real minister motive behind the theatrical promoter's seemingly fatherly interest in the heartbroken girl, and Valencia, proceeding to New York in immediately assigned to a part in a big revue Harland stages in a Broadway theater, Plunging into her work in an effort to keep from thinking of Roger, who she is confident is true to her, despite stories told her to the contrary, Valencia speedily becomes an accomplished dancer. Her fresh, youthful beauty and form are shown to best advantage when she leads several resplendent Indian costume numbers. Weeks pass, and unknown to Harland or his sweetheart, Roger is exonerated from the charges against him, due to a confession of Martha Leafur, and arrives in New York, where from a box, he sees Valencia as she leads one of the exotic numbers on the stage. NO. SIX. Once Harland has overcome Valencia's original antipathy toward him, he pays ardent but unwelcome court to the girl believing that Roger can never interfere, and that without friends, the innocent girl will soon succumb to his wiles. The night of Roger's visit to the theater, Harland, going to Valencia's dressing room, suddenly seizes the frightened girl in his arms and endeavors to kiss her. Roger entering the room, intent on surprising his sweetheart, and seeing her struggling in Harland's arms, Enraged, Roger tears the man from Valencia and fells him with one blow. The sobbing girl in his arms, McKay explains his arrest, and Valencia, disgusted with Harland, whose true nature she has just found out, wearied of the beautiful clothes and atmosphere with which the promoter had lured her to the metropolis, begs McKay to take her back with him to her home in the Northwoods. Overjoyed, Roger consents, and before many days pass the couple, happily married by Father John, plan their future in their "Country Beyond," in the placid wilderness of the Canadian Rockies. (The end.)

Academy Sports Writer Explains Why He Thinks C. F. A. Will Trim N. H. S. in Annual Grid Contest

The following article is written by "Curly" Lynaugh, C. F. A. senior and a member of the sports staff of The Evening Leader who explains why he thinks that the Blue and White will defeat the gridders from Northside High School by three touchdowns in the annual Thanksgiving day game. The seemingly advantages of the Hillsters are discussed in detail by the writer.

Having witnessed all of the Corning Free Academy games this year and most of the Northside High School fracas's the writer thinks the hillsters have a win the city championship by at least three touchdowns.

The Blue and White squad has had its worst season since Ernie Cramer assumed the role of head coach but the schedule has been one of the hardest and the material from which the hill mentor had to pick was none too promising.

The hillside aggregation is the lightest that has ever represented the school but it is also the fastest and its speed is expected to be one o fthe deciding factors in the struggle with the boys from the Northside of the river. C. F. A. has five backfield men who have an average of 11.2 seconds for the 100 yard dash. Briggs, who plays right half is credited with a mark of 10.2 and is the fastest man in the county. Waltman, who plays opposite the dusky athlete, is also a track man and has a mark of 11 seconds flat. Ferris at fullback also travels the cinder path in the spring and he too has a mark of 11 seconds. "Winnie" Beck travels the century in 11.2 and last but not least Captain McCranels is a 12 second man.

The line has in Warqnek a man who has run the 60 yard dash in the physical ability tests held at the Academy in 6.4 "Kenny" McCranels is a half mile man and has tried his luck at pole vaulting and Hallahan is a distance man, being a mile runner. This all goes to show that the hillsters have one of the speediest teams in the state.

These men should be able to nail Oborn, the shining light of the N. H. S. eleven, before he gets started. That is, of course, if they are able to break through the Orange and Black line.

The Academy warriors should be able to penetrate the Orange gridders defense as the latter has in its line several inexperienced men and so far this year they have done nothing to aid their team in the conquest of victory.

Wilcox, at center, will be facing a man such as he has never met before and, unless he improves greatly he will be unable to cope with the always stellar work of Warqnard N. Hi, has in Danninburg a strapping youth who looks like a football player and who has the makings of one, but being his first year he lacks experience and will be greatly handicapped. The Academy will be strong at guards as Hallahan and Richards, who will old down these positions in the annual game, are four year men and know the game from A to Z and they play it as they know it.

The teams will be evenly matched at tackles as Cole and Jamison who are playing their first year as regulars, have been displaying the same board of ball throughout the year and "Buck" Welch and "Jimmy" Tahany, both seasoned veterans, have been playing line-up games and they are sure to wage a hard fight if they draw the opposite tackle assignments. Cole is big and in this writer's mind is too big for the amount of ambition that he carries with him and he is dreadfully slow. This slowness could be excused if he were at least a half rate defensive man but he seems to be a weak tackler and does not play the game as it has been taught him by Coach Jacoby. Jamison should play the big boy even and "Buck" Welch will have in Tahany a tough customer and he will need, in his last game for his alma mater, to play his hardest.

The ends on both squads are weak and both pairs have much room for improvement. McCranels and DeSilva, the Academy flanks, will both be playing a position to which they are not accustomed. "Zal" has always been a backfield man, while McCranels is playing his first year and is as good at end as any other place. Adriance and Mullaney are also second raters but in the last few games the latter has shown much improvement and if this continues, he should be "going at top speed" by turkey day. Adriance has shown a tendency to lack nerve and has made few tackles during the whole year.

The Orange and Black backfield is also with the exception of the sensational Oborn and unless they are strong line buckers, which they haven't been all season, they will be held to very few first downs. Bavisotto is the only back, who has shown any line bucking ability throughout the season and then only against weak teams. He flashed an occasional line buck against the Maple City team but was not consistent. Capo, it is claimed, is not in the backfield to carry the ball, but to back up the line. A good idea, to say the least, and the chubby back has performed his duties well, but if he were on the line, the chances of the Orange and Black would be somewhat strengthened.

Lindbloom at quarter is a fine field general and has shown splendid judgment both at mixing the plays and at running the team. His generalship has been responsible in a large way for the success but his work as a ball carrier is not within striking distance of Captain McCranels, the Academy quarer, who is one of the finest broken field runners that has ever donned the moleskins for the hillside institution.

In the writer's opinion the Academy has a big edge over their opponents. Oborn is good and as good as any Blue and White backfield performer but his work alone cannot bring victory to his team and it will be a bad idea for the men from across the river to place all their hopes in their star as he may be in for a bad day, something every football player has and when fate dooms that it is to be your turn, the chances are that your work will not be worth anything that day. Then, too, he, like all other players, is subject to injury, and if he is hurt, has Northside High School anyone that can fill his shoes?

The reserve strength of the hillsters is far superior to that of their rivals as they have in Agett, Hillman, Shiners, Summers, Mourhess, Adams, Poland and Cartmell, men who can be called on at any moment and who are bound to show their stuff in fine fashion if they are given a chance.

Northside has a good edge in the kicking department as they have in Hanson a fine punter and a wonderful man for the kick-off. DeSilva is the Academy punter and gets off some nice punts and Jamison boots them for the hillsiders on the kick-off.

The Academy should win and will win if they play the same brand of ball that they used against Glen Cove as their team is stronger, faster, more experienced and it is going into the game for the first time in many years knowing that they will have to play real football and fight hard as it is the general opinion that the Oranege and Black team has the best chance to cop that it has had in many years.

There's At Least One in Every Country Club — By Briggs

N.H.S. and C.F.A. Men Who Will Clash in Annual Battle at Pyrex Park on Thanksgiving Day

ARVID HANSON
Right Guard N. H. S.

A tall blond youth of but 15 summers is holding down the right guard berth on the Northside High School grid aggregation and upon his young shoulders falls the kicking duties of the team.

Arvid Hanson is but a freshman in school but he towers over the other members of his class by a season of six feet in heighth and tips the beams at 156 pounds.

This youngster has unusual kicking ability and averages 50 yards of the kickoffs. He is also a pretty punter and rides the oval far and high. He was given a chance in the backfield early in the season but a mid-season shift placed him in the line and he comes out of his position at guard to do the booting honors when necessary.

Hanson has the build of any ideal lineman with long swinging arms and a lanky body that is capable of filling or tearing quite a hole in the line. He is somewhat hampered by inexperience but has the advantage of playing beside "Jimmy" Tahany, the fighting Irishman, and veteran of three seasons.

Arvid, like the great "Vic" of Syracuse, is bound to make a wonderful football player and it is probable that he will be shifted into the backfield after he has gained a little more experience.

He is slated for the line for the Thanksgiving day game, however, and N. H. S. is depending much on the trusty right leg of this youth.

JAMES "OPP" HALLAHAN
Right Guard C. F. A.

Right guard on the Corning Free Acad my team has been the subject of many changes throughout the year, but the probable starter in the city championship game will be James "Opp" Hallahan.

"Opp" is one of the most experienced men on the squad and will have played his last game for C. F. A. when the fatted turkey is but a memory.

Hallahan is the most versatile player on the Blue and White aggregation. He has played every position except quarter back and has played them well. He has shown more proficiency on the line however, and when a player stacks up against him he knows that he has a real battle on his hands. He is one of the best defensive men that Coach Cramer has developed and few gains are made through him. He played the best game of his career in the Glen Cove fracas, and the Corning paper highly lauded his stellar defensive work.

"Opp" is 18 years old, tips the beams at 157 pounds and stands five feet nine inches tall and when the annual game is called, he will be facing Hanson who lacks the experience and the Academy should have a solid edge in this position.

"Opp," like his opposite guard and teammate, Richards, is the second member of his family to represent the hill school on the gridiron and he is carrying out the work of "Casey," a member of the All-High. in fine fashion.

Hallahan is also a member of the track team, being a distance man and he has played on the interclass basketball teams, being a guard on last year's Junior class quint.

HARVARD INVITES PRINCETON TO A GRIEVANCE DISCUSSION

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 13.—(AP)—Prospects for peace in the football Big Three were brighter today with an invitation for "a complete and frank discussion of the grievances of each university" tendered by Harvard to Princeton.

The invitation was sent last night by the Harvard student council to Joseph Prendergast, president of the Princeton Senior Council, and backfield star. It was in reply to a letter sent by Prendergast before Princeton decided to break off all athletic relations with Harvard.

Prendergast had referred to an attack on Princeton morals in the Harvard Lampoon last Saturday, the day of the Princeton-Harvard football game, and asked for a definite explanation of operations as to Princeton from the Harvard student council.

Leo Daley, president of the student council, answered for Harvard as follows:

"While the student council regret the bad manners of the Lampoon editorial, it is only fair to say that there has been a recognizable element of bad feeling in our football relations for some time.

"Our council suggests that a representative be appointed by each council to meet early next month to enter into a complete and frank discussion of the grievances of each university. We feel that only by such means can an ultimate and satisfactory agreement be made.

"In any case we sincerely hope that the action of your board of athletic control in closing the Harvard relations will in no way affect the cooperation of our student bodies in those things in which we have always stood side by side."

Upon first being informed of the letter, Dr. Charles W. Kennedy, chairman of the Princeton board of athletic control, declined to talk on the matter. Prendergast could not be reached last night due to football training rules which prohibited his being disturbed.

Frank Peabody, member of Princeton's senior council and editor of the Daily Princetonian, expressed belief that "in time" Princeton would be glad to attend such a conference.

CROWD OF 70,000 FANS JAM YANKEE STADIUM TODAY FOR ARMY-NOTRE DAME CONTEST

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—(AP)—A record wave of 400,000 football fans rolled toward the stadium enclosing eastern gridirons today as historic rivals marshalled their cohorts in the battle pits.

The vanguard of the largest crowd ever looked upon a struggle of moleskin warriors in this city—70,000 fans—choked the arteries of traffic in an early march upon Yankee Stadium, scene of an intersectional struggle between Knute Rockne's Notre Dame eleven and Army involving the national championship.

The huge closed horseshoe of Harvard stadium at Cambridge, with its seating capacity of 55,000 and the attraction of Brown's eleven, "Iron Men" opposing a fighting Crimson host, combined as a focal point for New Englanders, with Boston where Haskell Indians brought intersectional lustre to the match with Boston College.

The big green of Dartmouth, invading Ithaca, N. Y., after a sorry season meet a Cornell team blasted by Columbia, had little hope of repeating last season's crushing triumph before the 45,000 thronging to the upstate New York battleground. At Philadelphia gates were thrown open to 40,000 for the annual clash of Pennsylvania and Columbia, and the Pittsburg-Washington and Jefferson struggle awaited a similar throng.

Supporters of the Navy marshalled at Annapolis to aid with cheers in warding off the massive Georgetown attack that threatened a sudden end to the middle drive for national honors, while the intense rivalry of Colgate and Syracuse jammed the roads to the latter playground as 40,000 headed for the conflict.

While several elevens that have drawn national interest on previous Saturdays were forced into the back ground today by engagements with minor opponents, the interest of their followers was no less diminished.

FOOTBALL AND BOXING

BY FEG MURRAY

Copyright, 1926, by Metropolitan Newspaper Service

Football seems to mix well with other sports. In previous articles, I have discussed various athletes who have combined the gridiron game with baseball, track and field, and golf. Today let us look over a few pigskin artists who can use their hands for more than just throwing and receiving forward passes.

It is a rule in football that the offensive linemen may not use their hands. At New York University, Coach Meehan has a big six-foot-four tackle, who knows how to use his hands in a most offensive way. But not on the gridiron, for Al Lassman, an intercollegiate boxing champion, plays quite within the rules, and plays very well too. It is in the ring that Al's duker are used so offensively. Four first-round knockouts in an amateur tournament have convinced Al that there is a future in professional boxing for him, if he wants to follow such a gentle career after three or four years of football.

There have been plenty of other grid stars who were fine boxers, and many of them met with considerable success in their ring efforts. Monte Munn, for instance, is much more famous as a heavyweight boxer than he was as a mediocre tackle at Nebraska. Vandegrift, a Yale tackle, acted as one of Gene Tunney's sparring partners for several days at Stroudsburg. And "Duke" Sedgewick, Harvard tackle of 1918 or '19, was a splendid boxer. Pythian, a University of Southern California player, was good enough to have the astute Jack Kearns as a manager.

Sully Montgomery and Ed Garvey, of Centre College and Notre Dame, respectively, advanced well along as prize-fighters, and one or the other of them made the statement that boxing was a picnic compared to a real hard football game.

That's what "Ma" Stribling evidently thought, too, when she refused to let her famous son, Willie, play football at the Macon (Georgia) High School. "Football," said "Ma," "is too dangerous." And at that there have been many mere fatalities on the gridiron than within the roped arena. But how does "Ma" explain all the tackling that her so ndid when he fought Berlenbach in New York?

MICHIGAN AND OHIO BATTLE FOR RANKING

CHICAGO, Nov. 13.—(AP)—The battling of Michigan and Ohio State for top ranking in the western conference was the feature of today's mid-western football.

Columbus was thronged for the biggest big ten game of the fall, with national gridiron attendance records threatened at the Buckeye stadium.

Northwestern, the third team undefeated in the championship race, also was in action and in spite of a generally conceded purple triumph over Chicago the renewal of this old rivalry attracted a capacity crowd.

THE ROUND-UP

ARMY-NOTRE DAME—At New York. In the approximate words of Dr. Shakespeare: "When two men ride a horse, one must ride behind."

The Army and Notre Dame are trying to ride the same horse this afternoon, a horse called The Unbeaten, and one of them must ride behind or fall off. These two old rivals have never met in such a setting before, with the scalps of so many dangling from the belt. When the Army and Notre Dame meet all that one has to do is keep picking Notre Dame and be right four times out of five. But here is an occasion where the Army has slightly the better team if it isn't too badly out-foxed. There is no better backfield than Harding, Traynell, Wilson, Murrell, Cagle and Hewitt. And this backfield is working back of a strong line from end to end. The Army ought to win, but Knute Rockne is full of guile and craft and cunning and this brings on a most uncertain aspect. Flanagan is a great running back and he will annoy the Army most of the afternoon. But as between the two I think the Army has the edge in what ought to be one of the best contests of the year.

YALE-PRINCETON—At Princeton. Yale's play in the Dartmouth game was at least a touchdown, possibly two touchdowns, below Princeton's play in the Harvard game. As the Dartmouth game was Yale's best showing, one can figure how far the Blue must come along to have an even chance.

Yale has no luck to match Jake Slagle and no field general to match Dan Caulkins. Scott and Fishwick are not up to Moeser and Lawler at the flanks. Sturhahn will be the best forward on the field and there is a chance that with full strength Yale can send in a line from tackle to tackle that will hold its own. Yale's line play will have to be far better than Princeton's for Yale to have an even chance.

This doesn't seem to be a reasonable turn. The same game that Princeton played against Harvard will beat Yale today. And Princeton ought to be better if Slagle is ready to travel. It will take a great emotional uprising on Yale's part coupled with a Princeton slump to pull Yale through. Anything can happen. But Princeton ought to win. The Tiger has too many advantages—and the Tiger also has Slagle and Caulkins.

MICHIGAN-OHIO STATE—At Columbus. This will be the three-star feature of the Western Conference. Ohio State has drawn a clean slate up to the kick-off this afternoon, but Ohio State hasn't met a team up to Michigan's strength yet. Michigan has the two stronger ends in Oosterbaan and Flora, and Michigan has the better field general and the better passer in Friedman. But Michigan hasn't the running strength that Ohio State has with Karow, Grim, Eby and Marek (if the latter is in shape to play). Gilbert is a star, but the others are not up to the Ohio standard. Friedman will have a hard time passing consistently against the speed of Ohio's backfield covering the Wolverine receiver.

The two teams are so well matched that the break of the game one way or another should furnish the answer. The Navy defeat had no bearing on the Western Conference scrap, and the winner at Columbus will have a lead on any rival.

BROWN-HARVARD—At Cambridge. Harvard has dropped three games so far and Brown is unbeaten. Yet Brown's margin over Harvard isn't large. Brown with a strong line, two strong ends and a fast backfield should win after a close battle, but Horween and his staff have done a fine job at Cambridge in a brief space, and Brown can't afford to make many mistakes.

NAVY-GEORGETOWN—At Annapolis. Georgetown has a way of picking up November speed, but the Navy looks too strong. If Coach Ingram sends his first string into action he will have more than Georgetown can stop. There are no better tackles than Wickhorst and Eddy playing football today. And there are no better all-around backfields than the Navy can send to the front. It will be largely a matter of mental attitude. If the Navy is looking for a romp there may be a number of painful moments.

COLUMBIA-PENNSYLVANIA—At Philadelphia. A hard game for Columbia with Penn about due to get started again. Pennsylvania's fine prospects were checked rather suddenly by Illinois and Penn State, but the Red and Blue team is strong and should have the call over a Columbia team that will hustle to the finish but it takes a hard charging line to break up the "hidden ball" play, and if Columbia has this factor working the game will be extremely close.

CORNELL-DARTMOUTH — At Ithaca. If Butterfield is in shape Cornell should have an edge. Cornell should have a stronger running game than Dartmouth, and Dartmouth's passing game hasn't worked out with the Oberlander-Sage-Tully combination gone. Cornell with a strong line and a strong running attack has the call.

SYRACUSE - COLGATE — At Syracuse. One of the hardest games of the day with Colgate carrying a slight margin as long as Whippet Carr is absent. Colgate has two stars to offer in Shaughnessy and Mehler, who have a lot of driving power. Syracuse has a star in Captain Hansen, who can offset more than a few tough breaks.

N. Y. U. should beat Davis Elkins, Northwestern upset Chicago and Pittsburgh face an even thing against W. and J.

Sport Briefs Sent Over the Wire By Associated Press

(By The Associated Press)

The eastern football conference move appears to have taken root in at least five universities, Pennsylvania, Brown, Dartmouth, Cornell and Columbia. Pennsylvania and Brown were approval of the idea, the other three are announced as receptive, while Army, Princeton and Yale indicate their willingness to listen to proposals.

Unless some owner stubs his toe on the old resin bag again, there will be no political battles this year for the baseball magnates, who have been called to their annual pow wow with Commissioner Landis at Chicago on December 16. Although relations between the two major leagues have been strained for some time, the chieftains see no leading issue over which to start a general rumpus.

Harriers of twenty-one eastern universities will toil over the hills of Van Cortlandt Park in the annual Intercollegiate cross country championship on Monday, November 22. Syracuse, defending the title its runners annexed a year ago, looks for Jim Loucks to win the individual trophy.

SINCLAIR OIL

WAR on WASTE!

With the Law of Lubrication, Corning Mahaffey Brothers Oil Corporation makes war on wasteful methods of lubrication which lessen the power and lower the value of automobile engines.

We introduced in this community this common-sense method of recommending the right grade of Sinclair Opaline Motor Oil—a simple and valued method which means more satisfied car owners. We do not sell just "oil." We sell correct lubrication for economical transportation, scientifically based on the wear of the engine at its present mileage condition.

NEW GOVERNOR KNOWN IN CITY

Pennsylvania Executive Spoke at Central Meeting Here In April, 1924

"The Pennsylvania division of the New York Central Railroad not only furnishes a larger number of the officials for the New York Central lines but also furnishes state and government officers as well," said a well known local railroad man today in referring to the election of John S. Fisher, of Indiana, Pa., as governor of Pennsylvania. Mr. Fisher was elected by a majority at the recent election in the neighboring state.

Governor-elect Fisher is well known locally among the employes of the Pennsylvania division of the Central lines as he has been here on various occasions and on April 3, 1924 was the principal speaker at the first annual banquet of the Fall Brook Association. Mr. Fisher was at that time Pennsylvania state counsel for the New York Central and president of the Beech Creek lines. When introduced at the banquet here in 1924 it was said that he was prominently mentioned as the next governor of Pennsylvania.

It is remembered with much pride by men of the local division that the Pennsylvania division was toasted as the training school of the New York Central by various speakers including Mr. Fisher and it was shortly after that that several of the Pennsylvania division men were elevated to higher positions on the main line. It was shortly after this that Patrick E. Crowley, who was formerly superintendent of the local division was named president of the New York Central to succeed President A. H. Smith who died in the early part of 1924.

Keeping Clothes Expenditures Down

After a girl is married is no sign that she must have a shoddy appearance. Of course she hasn't always the money to spend for clothing that she had before her wedding. There is economy in the home and the "budget" must be strictly observed.—Hence there isn't much extra money for clothing.

But the wise girl knows that proper care of the clothing—dry cleaned the Carr-Way—will give her a well-dressed appearance and will keep the "clothing" item well within the budget limits.

Call us and let our driver call for and deliver your clothes.

If an advertisement is going to bring results it must be read, and if it is going to be read it must receive favorable position. It is sure a newspaper cannot position all ads, but on Saturday night when the department, clothing, furniture and shoe store advertising is light, it is easier for the foreman to give preferred position.

An advertisement (according to the nature of course) is worth more in the Saturday night issue because it has more readers. The greater the number of advertisements in the paper the more the competition for readers; the more the competition the lesser the possible returns.

Newspapers base their advertising rates on the number of subscribers and an advertiser should base the value of his advertising on the number of prospective readers. For greater results, advertise in the issue where your advertising dominates.

Charles Packer Completes Semester With Honor at Meeker's

Corning Man Former Graduate Pays Visit To Institute

December Classes Will Be Formed November 29

Other News Notes of Interest At "The School Worth While"

ELMIRA, Nov. 12—Two young men, who are studying Accounting in the Commercial Department of the Meeker Business Institute, have completed the first section of their work with very good standings. They are, Mr. Kenyon Hopkins, Talula Heights, N. Y., 97 per cent, and Mr. Charles Packer, Corning, N. Y., 95 per cent. They entered the Institute in September and are already well under way with their work.

CLIFFORD TOMBS

Mr. Tombs, of Corning, N. Y., a former graduate, was a pleasant caller at the Institute on Monday. Mr. Tombs is working in one of the Railroad offices in Corning, N. Y., where he is making a good record.

GRADUATES

Mr. Lawrence Niles of Elmira, N. Y., has completed his work in the Junior Accounting Course. Mr. Ralph Seddon of Sayre, Pa., has also completed the work in the Accounting Course. These young men received their Certificates of Graduation this week.

AWARDS

The Following young people have received awards for proficiency in Typewriting:

Diploma For Proficiency; for writing 30 words or more per minute. Mildred Mandeville, 25; Ruth Faulkner, 25; Evelyn Bates, Wood, Candford, 30; Genevieve Witucki, 30.

Bronze Pin for writing 40 words or more. Anna Kuhn, 43; Elizabeth Morice, 44.

Silver Pin, for writing 50 or more words per minute, Bess Williams, 51.

PENMANSHIP

The "Meeker Eleven" consists of the eleven best papers handed in daily by the Penmanship Class. To become eligible for the Honor List, the student must have made the "Eleven" at least three times during the week. The following have been successful in this respect during the past week:

Frances Baker, Anna Blair, Evelyn Filbert, Nellie Hrabchak, Content Glover, Ida Johnson, Dorothy Jones, Beatrice Williams, Mildred Juskiv, Evelyn Littell and Ethel Simpson.

IMPORTANT

Any persons planning to enter December classes at Meeker's Business Institute are asked to especially notice that these classes will be formed on November 29. This is being done in order that a full month's work may be completed before the Christmas Vacation. Arrangements should be made as soon as possible for those who have not registered.

ARMISTICE DAY

The Meeker Business Institute observed Armistice Day by the Silent Tribute at 11:00 A. M., November 11. School remained in session throughout the entire day, and the period of vacation was transferred to the Friday after Thanksgiving. School will close November 24, and will again resume sessions on November 29.

PERSONALITY

The September class completed its work in Personality training on October 15. The members of the class were asked to write a final paper on the work, in competition for a prize offered by the Management. The class due to its size, had to be divided into two sections. The best papers in either group were submitted by Frederick Surprenat, Elmira, N. Y., and Evelyn Littell, Bradford, N. Y. These two young people were presented useful leather gifts.

It was unusually difficult to judge the papers submitted, and, of course, impossible to recognize all worthy work by awarding a prize. However, Honorable Mention is due the following young people for the unusually good papers submitted:

The Department Supervision, which also conducts the training in Personality, is doing everything in its power to make Meeker students ready to enter the Business World. Every attention is given each individual, in order that his individual needs may be met. The parents of students in school are invited to visit the school at any time and inspect the work that is being done.

PLAN HEARINGS ON CROSSINGS

Three Projects To Be Discussed At Hearings Here on December 2

The grade crossing elimination project has at last reached Steuben County. The Public Service Commission yesterday announced 19 public hearings in connection with its grade crossing elimination program at various points throughout the state and one of these hearings will be held in Corning on December 2.

There will be three grade crossings considered at the hearing here and are Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad crossings. One is the first crossing east of the Big Flats station in the town of Big Flats, the second is the Race street crossing in the town of Erwin and the third is the second crossing west of Kanona in the town of Avoca.

At these hearings the railroads and municipalities interested as well as the state department of Public Works and property owners are invited to be present to consider the question of necessity for elimination and the plans to be adopted in the event the elimination is ordered.

It is believed that a mistake has been made in the announcement sent out by the Public Service Commission in regard to the town of Erwin crossing. The report states "Race street" but it is believed that the crossing in question is that on West Water street as there has been some previous action on this.

MAJOR ANDREWS PUTS BAN ON DRY AGENTS' STRONG ARM METHODS

Destruction of Property Must be Stopped He Declares in Manifesto for Entire Country

Willful destruction of property and strong arm methods employed by some Federal agents in making raids and such as is claimed to have been used in Steuben county on occasions, must be stopped according to a manifesto issued by Commander-in-chief Major General Andrews of the prohibition enforcement army.

Explaining why the names of four of his officers will appear no longer on the rolls he listed "frankness and straightforwardness" as qualities to be cultivated by prohibition agents and describing the careful and unsinister methods" as something that would not be tolerated. The announcement of the removal of four of the dry agents is contained in an Associated Press dispatch from Washington.

This public declaration was addressed to the field forces of prohibition the country over and contained directives that enforcers "must not stop automobiles except for unquestionable reasons indicating that the car is engaged in illicit practice."

"In view of this warning issued to those engaged in the enforcement of the law, and in particular the following news item taken from this week's issue of the Hammondsport Herald concerning alleged high handed methods of local enforcement officers is of interest:

"Last Friday afternoon two men, one of whom called himself Metro Mecyak, stopped at Lou Werre's house on Davis avenue. Mecyak related the story of a sick wife, who would profit greatly by some good wine and in consequence, Mr. Warren let him have two gallons. However, in a few minutes the two men returned with part of a broken jug, and claimed that the wine had cracked the jar and all of it had been lost. When they told Warren this, he gave them two more gallons to replace what in reality had been smashed on a rock at the corner of Davis Ave. and Pulteney st.

"The next day, while the Warren family was in Geneva and with no one in the house, but Mrs. Warren's two small children, seven years of age, the Sheriff of Steuben County, with two helpers, entered the Warren home and in the cellar they carried 120 pints of home brew and a large keg, used for the boiling of chicken feed, into the front yard. When the bottles had been smashed and the boiler hacked to pieces, the Sheriff and his confederates re-entered the cellar and drained about 240 gallons of grape juice, which was not even a day old. Not being satisfied with that, they empties on the floor already covered with juice before mentioned grape juice, twenty-five gallons of vinegar. They next copied two barrels of sweet cider but on the protests of Mr. Brown, the cider was sampled and left untouched.

"One of the trio is reported to have put in a long distance call to an Elmira newspaper and gave them a ludicrous account of the raid. He stated there were 250 gallons of home brew, instead of 120 pints; that there were 750 gallons of wine, in reality there were only 240 gallons of 20 hour old grape juice."

A dispatch in the New York Times in which some of the example made of the four dry officials states as follows:

"The four men summarily dismissed from the service for violating these policies included Robert L. Livingston, Deputy Prohibition Administrator for Eastern Florida and Columbia. The others were accused under him. All were accused of having held up and searched without warrant the motor car of Charles R. Nash, Deputy Commissioner of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, which is the parent of the prohibition unit, who reported the incident, he said solely in his capacity as a citizen.

"It was not the first time the agents of General Andrews had pounced upon the wrong automobile. Some months ago an effort was dismissed in New Orleans because he arrested a man and woman for having a pint flask of whiskey in their car, and then compelled them to drive up a court more than 150 miles away for a hearing.

"One of the much-repeated stories among Government officials here in the capital tells how a high judicial officer, driving back to Washington after a fishing trip, was stopped by prohibition agents, who searched his car despite his protests, and found nothing.

General Andrews said today that his course in the latest strong-arm case was calculated to set an example that would protect from mistreatment the humblest citizen equally with the most powerful official of the government.

"The whole incident, in all its particulars, shows a serious lack of conformity with our instructions and general policy for the conduct of law enforcement,' General Andrews said in his order to his field officers. 'The Deputy Administrator showed a deplorable lack of leadership and sense of responsibility, and, furthermore during the investigation was far from exhibiting the qualities of frankness and straightforwardness which should characterize an officer in our service.

"The agents used drawn revolvers and threatening and insulting language and methods absolutely without cause or even excuse. They did not announce themselves as Federal officers, or show their badges. They might easily have been mistaken for bandits and had the occupants of the car been armed, their ridiculous conduct might easily have resulted in a shooting scrape. They have shown themselves absolutely unworthy to exercise the authority and dignity of Federal officers.

"Let this be a lesson to them and to all others that the department means business when it directs that its agents shall operate only within the law and in a lawful manner.

"It is definitely directed that our agents must not stop automobiles except for unquestioned reasons indicating that the car is engaged in illicit practice.'"

Next week the County Board of Supervisors of its regular fall session will receive a communication from Sheriff W. B. Page, a copy of which has already been published in the newspapers of the county, in which the Sheriff besesches the county solons to pay bills incurred by detective work in dry enforcement. It is believed by many that the manifesto of Gen. Andrews is exceptionally interesting to Steuben County at this time due to that fact.

ENJOY PAGEANT AT CONVENTION

Local Women Delegates High In Praise for Program at Binghamton

Delegates from Corning city returning from the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs held in Binghamton this week, were enthusiastic in their praises of the pageant, "Permanent Peace With Honor," which was the feature of "President's Night" held Thursday evening in Kalurah Temple.

When Mrs. Charles M. Dickinson was elected president of the federation, she suggested the slogan, "Permanent Peace With Honor" and other pageants particularly fitting for the evening which climaxed and brought to an end Mrs. Dickinson's successful two year term of office.

The program began with two organ selections by Harold Vincent Milligan. This was followed by one peal from the organ, which was taken up by the trumpeters, who played the march from Aida. Following them came two Girl Scouts carrying an American flag.

Then began the processional of the presidents, including Mrs. Dickinson, her aide, Mrs. W. R. Whitman, of Little Falls, and her page, Miss Martha Fuller Milligan of Lowville; past presidents and officers of the state federation, Mrs. Thomas Winter, past president of the general federation and the presidents of the various clubs represented. In this latter group was Mrs. Clara C. Smith, president of Corning Woman's Club.

Mrs. Dickinson, who had been beautifully gowned for every occasion throughout the convention, wore a gown of even more striking beauty at this event. Fashioned of heavy white satin, the gown was most artistically made. Its beauty was enhanced with a graceful court train falling from the shoulders.

Following the processional came 20 young Binghamton women robed in white Grecian costumes and carrying palms branches. Wide gold bands encircled their hair. They advanced in the platform, where Honor was enthroned in the center of the stage before a background of a large American flag.

After an aesthetic movement on the platform, the young women threw flowers at either side of Honor and Mrs. Dickinson appeared, carrying a white dove, which she released in flight.

Honor took the dove, the symbol of the peace for the establishment of which the federation had worked for the past two years, and sent it flying out over the audience and thence from the platform to the representatives of the federation out over the world, the bird flying through an open window to take the message to the world.

Preceding the presentation of the dove to Honor by Mrs. Dickinson, Miss Margaret Decker, of Binghamton, played four harp solos.

Following the pageant, Mrs. Dickinson presided at the remainder of the program.

Speaking on "International Relations," Mrs. Thomas G. Winter of Minneapolis, told of the changes which have caused a change of relationships between nations and paid a tribute to the American War heroes. She added that the pledge made to the men, who went to the War "that the nation not be kept neat, and she urged the clubwomen to do all they could in their respective communities to establish permanent peace.

Sergeant Ruth Farnham told of the many places where she had spoken the last year. She asked the women of the federation to have a keener sense of responsibility in relation to the ballot.

A group of national songs were sung by St. Michael's Greek Catholic choir with a chorus of sixty-five voices under the leadership of Nyron Korykora. Charles Bradford Beach of New York, baritone, gave a group of songs appropriate to Armistice Day. Harold Vincent Milligan was at the piano.

At the supper in the Art gallery of the Arlington following the session in Kalurah temple, Mrs. Dickinson, retiring president, received from the officers, directors and chairmen of departments, a white gold wrist watch set in a frame of small diamonds. To members of the board were presented various articles from the recent store with humorous comments explanatory of their suitability.

County Judge Brown Tells Rotarians Experiments In Steuben County

County Judge Edwin S. Brown of Cohocton, honorary member of the Bath Rotary club addressed the Hornell Rotarians recently on "Brotherhood" and it was of special interest as it dealt largely with his work as Judge of the county juvenile courts.

The judge stated that the idea of brotherhood was growing more important each day. In New York city, he said, a large suite of offices was maintained by a federation of the United States and Canada for the sole purpose of expanding the idea of the big brother and big sister. College boys and girls who enter their freshman year are continually being looked after by a big brother or sister who is working out the idea in every stage of life.

Bringing the topic down to its relationship with boys' work and the Rotary Boys Division, he told how the idea was put in force. Boys who were orphans or else disregarded by their parents, he said, were taken by the federation before they reached the delinquent stage. Their case was reviewed and then they were given over to some man who acted as a big brother.

"Boys resent too much authority even from parents," said the judge. "They respond quickly, however, to intelligent instruction. A boy wants to know anything, he asks questions and the huge mistake parents make is telling their children that questions are foolish. The big brother answers all questions and in this manner finds out what the boy is interested in.

The same system is followed out in Industry where 800 boys are taken care of by the state. During the 30 days observation, experts learn where to place the boy for instruction by merely answering their questions.

In illustration of the subject the judge reviewed some interesting experience as district attorney about 15 years ago. Hestold of a Corning man who was said to be the leader of a gang of 20 boy robbers who was sent to the penitentiary on one indictment and had three others hanging over him when he was released. Through the interest taken in him by a Corning man, none of these three were prosecuted and he was released, to become employed by the Corning man. "He has never committed another crime since that time," said the Judge, "because he had a big brother to look after him."

"The only necessary thing in practicing the brotherhood idea," he said, "is to have the boy fitted to the man and the man to the boy. Some of the most successful boys which others could not persuade in the least. Failures in some cases are pardonable for this work is new, but on the whole, the idea works satisfactorily."

MRS. GEORGE STERMER HONORED BY FRIENDS

Mrs. Ernest Stermer, of Fuller avenue, delightfully entertained the members of the Fifth Avenue Sewing Club at her home Thursday evening. The meeting was turned into a stork shower for her sister-in-law, Mrs. George Stermer, mother of a son born Sunday, November 7.

During the evening the club members sewed on articles for the baby. Later the gifts were sent to Mrs. Stermer.

A dainty luncheon was served to the following: Mrs. John Rawlins, Mrs. Lester Reynolds, Mrs. Hugh Johnson, Mrs. Samuel Johnson, Mrs. Howard Confer, Mrs. Harry Wood, Mrs. Charles Potter, Mrs. John Hesson, Mrs. Lester Moore, Mrs. Adaline Moore, Mrs. Raymond Bates, Mrs. Raymond Reynolds, Mrs. Frederick Stermer, and Mrs. Fred Dutcher, of Elmira; Mrs. Walker, of Mansfield, Pa., and the hostess, Mrs. Ernest Stermer.

FATHER HARRINGTON REPORTED IMPROVED

The condition of the Rev. Thomas Harrington, pastor of St. Catherine's Church at Addison, who is in Corning Hospital, was stated today as being improved.

Father Harrington has been suffering from a complication of ailments and was removed to the hospital Monday when his condition became such that he required constant attention. His physician stated this morning that he is rallying well and that he has passed the crisis and is on the road to recovery.

SPECIAL TERM COUNTY COURT

Four Prisoners Arraigned Before Judge E. S. Brown at County Seat

Mrs. Anna Ashe, of Palmyra, recently indicted on a charge of robbery, was arraigned before Judge E. S. Brown at a special term of County Court held in Bath Friday. The woman entered a plea of not guilty and bail was fixed at $5,000.

The alleged crime for which Mrs. Ashe is being held occurred in the town of Woodhull on September 2, 1921, when it was claimed that while in company with two men, assaulted and robbed Clarence Dietch, a Hornell taxi driver whom they had hired to drive them to Woodhull. Earl Curtiss, of Addison, who is said to be one of the men involved, is now in Bath jail awaiting trial.

Mrs. Bessie Youngs of Keuka, was arraigned yesterday on an old indictment, which charged her with keeping a gambling device. She pleaded guilty, was fined $200 and ordered to dispose of the machine. This indictment resulted from a visit of Sheriff Page to Mrs. Youngs' hotel some time ago when it was claimed he found a nickle machine being operated.

Anthony Strianni, of Hornell, indicted on a charge of assault, second degree, entered a plea of not guilty and bail of $1500 was demanded in his case.

Charles Morando pleaded not guilty to a charge of having a gun in his possession and bail in the case was fixed at $200.

QUEEN MARIE PLANS TO GO TO FLORIDA

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Nov. 13.—(AP)—Queen Marie will make a trip to Florida before she leaves the country, it was announced in her train today. Previously it was planned for Marie to sail on December 24, but there are indications that she will depart two weeks earlier and spend Christmas at home.

RETURN FROM TRIP

Dr. Daniel W. Howell, pastor of Grace Methodist Episcopal church, and Mrs. Howell returned Thursday evening from a trip to New York and Philadelphia, Pa. Mrs. Howell had been spending a few days at their summer home in Southold, L. I., which she closed for the winter the latter part of last week. Dr. Howell left for the New York Monday and they went to Philadelphia, Pa., where they were guests of relatives. While there they visited the Sesquicentennial.

Deaths-Funerals

James H. Winfield

Cardiac asthma, from which he had suffered for the past two weeks is the cause of the death of James H. Winfield, at his home, 168 Baker street, yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock, November 12, 1926.

Mr. Winfield was born in Corning February 17, 1861 and had spent practically all of his 65 years in this city. On June 4, 1885 he was united in marriage to Amelia G. Straubinger, in this city.

For the past 17 years he was employed in the Store Department of the New York Central railroad, where he was very well liked and had a host of staunch friends. He was a member of the Maccabee Lodge.

Besides his wife, he is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Thomas Moore, of 172 Baker street, and Miss Emma and Miss Ida Winfield at home; three nieces, Mrs. Maxwell B. Baxter of Waverly, Miss May Clark of New York City and Mrs. Ida Sich, of Baroda, Mich., and one nephew, Burton Winfield, also of Baroda, Mich.

The funeral will be held at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon from the late home. Dr. E. J. Stuart, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, will officiate. Interment will be in Home Cemetery.

Identity of New York State Executioner Revealed; Former Assistant to Edwin F. Davis

The mystery man of the Sing Sing death house, who succeeded Edwin F. Davis during his thirty years of executions, and who has conducted in the last year, has been revealed as Robert G. Elliott, electrician in the Richmond Hill section of Long Island. Since he succeeded John Hulbert, the new state executioner has managed to hide the fact from all save a few prison officials, and so closely was his secret kept that members of his own family did not know he was the executioner until reporters called at his home in New York.

Even when he realized that his identity was no longer a secret Elliott tried hard to keep the facts from becoming generally known. He disclosed for the first time that the former executioner, John Hulbert, had given up the job because his life was constantly threatened. Edwin F. Davis, late of Corning, who for a great many years was the state executioner, was co-inventor with Harry L. Tyler, of New York, formerly of Corning, of the electric chair now being used.

The state executioner was almost moved to tears as he reviewed the probable effect of the publication of his name. He said he had always been "just a regular fellow with regular friends," and he expressed the fear some of his friends might misunderstand him. His house was surrounded by photographers eager to take his picture, and for last night, at least, he was unable to go home for dinner. As he talked of the difficulties of the situation he was seated in his automobile a few blocks away from the house, watching for the photographers to depart.

Elliott is a slender, gaunt man of sixty. Two piercing black eyes set deep in his head lend light to an otherwise deadly pale face. When he talks the upper lids of his eyes come down halfway, and an expression of sadness seems to linger. His face is lined and furrowed. His forehead bulges a little, but there are deep depressions on each side of his head at the temples. His hands are massive for a man of his stature and show the marks of a lifetime of toil with tools.

"I don't see why folks are curious about be," he said complainingly. "I am just an ordinary human being, the same as everybody else. I was in the prison service twenty years as an electrician until I retired eight years ago. I was an assistant to Mr. Davis for a time, and when Hulbert quit I was the only one in the state who had performed an execution. They needed me last winter, and I went in there and did my duty.

"Some one has to do that job. The man who does it is no more responsible for the man in the chair being there than the judge and the jury. I wish folks would let me alone about this. If I was a bachelor I wouldn't give a hang, but I am a married man and my daughter learned for the first time about it on my job. Now all I am trying to do is to serve the state, and the less said about it the better. I suppose I will have to go to church just as I have done for years, but now folks will talk about me."

Elliott has so far turned the current upon ten men in the Sing Sing electric chair. He gets $150 for each execution. There are four more executions scheduled to take place before the end of the year. In addition to his work in this state, Elliott is also the executioner for Massachusetts and from time to time has served for the State of Pennsylvania. He has until now kept his identity concealed in the three states.

When Elliott was appointed to take Hulbert's place the new policy of concealing the identity of the state executioner was decided upon. He declares he had an agreement that no prison official would ever disclose his identity. Sing Sing officials still decline to discuss the matter, and Elliott, in talking, did so only in a last effort to still keep his name from the public.

SUGGESTION FOR TAX REBATE EYED ASKANCE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—(AP)—Leading Republicans of the House Ways and Means Committee, which must initiate any tax legislation, eyed askance today the administration suggestion for a rebate to be paid next year on individual and corporation incomes earned in 1926.

Formal statements from Chairman Green, Iowa, and Representative Bacharach, Republican, New Jersey, gave only qualified approval and indicated their personal preference for using the $250,000,000 treasury surplus to reduce the public debt and thus indirectly decrease the tax burden total.

GROUP MEET ON TUESDAY

District Superintendent Young Cooperating With Board of Home Missions

In cooperation with the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church, District Superintendent W. M. Young of Hornell, has arranged a series of group meetings covering the entire Corning District.

The local sub-district group will meet here in the Grace Church Tuesday, November 23. Regular sessions will be held at 10 a. m., 2:30 p. m. and 7:30 p. m. A supper meeting has also been arranged. It is expected that the churches of Corning, Painted Post, Lindley, Addison, Woodhull, Campbell, Savona, Hammondsport, Pulteney, Prattsburg, Tyrone, Bath, Bradford, Kanona, and Wheeler will be represented at the meeting by delegates from all the local church organizations.

All individuals interested are invited and urged to attend the sessions. Speakers of national reputation will be present and speak, including Rex. Alexander Corson, Rev. M. A. Dawber and Rev. Adam Nagay.

The meetings are for educational and inspirational purposes and not for financial solicitation. The discussions and addresses will deal with the work of the local church and the nation-wide program of the denomination. The evening speaker is the Rev. Adam Nagay. A day of information, inspiration and Christian fellowship is assured those who attend the meetings.

DRIVER DRUNK, POLICE CHARGE

Charles J. Boxenbark Held For Hearing at Post on November 23

The hearing of Charles J. Boxenbark, of East Market street, who is facing a charge of driving a motor car while intoxicated, which was scheduled for yesterday afternoon before Charles A. Cole of Painted Post, has been adjourned until November 23.

The man was arrested Wednesday evening after he had crashed his car into the rear end of one driven by Frank Wood of East Market street on East Water street, Painted Post. Both men went before Justice Cole and the latter was confined to the jail when it was discovered that he was in an alleged intoxicated condition, the warrant for his arrest being sworn out by Mr. Wood.

The release of the defendant was secured later in the evening by his attorney, Thomas F. Rogers, and the hearing set for yesterday. An adjournment was made when it was impossible for Mr. Rogers to appear yesterday. The $200 bond for Boxenbark's appearance was furnished by his mother.

—Miss Dorothy Ellis of Denison Parkway is visiting friends in Syracuse.

SETTLEMENT IN DAMAGE ACTION

Mrs. S. K. Wolcott Gets $5,000, Husband $1,500 As Result of Smash

Announcement was made today by the law firm of Chegey & Costello that settlement had been effected in two negligence actions brought by Mrs. Fanny S. Wolcott and Samuel K. Wolcott against Karl J. Hounker, all of this city. The cases were listed on the calendar for the present term of Supreme Court here.

The total amount of the settlement is said to be $6,500. Mrs. Wolcott receiving $5,000 for serious injuries she suffered in an automobile accident and Mr. Wolcott $750 for damages to his car and $750 for the loss of his wife's service.

The actions were brought as the result of an automobile accident last winter: the Water street crossing of the Erie railroad at Painted Post. It was claimed that Mr. Wolcott's car in which Mrs. Wolcott was a passenger was run into by Hounker and badly damaged and an approaching freight train then struck the damaged car and demolished it. Mrs. Wolcott had a narrow escape from death when she was helped from the wrecked car just before it was struck by the train.

There are two other actions on the calendar of the present term of court which have been brought against Hounker. One of these is brought by Walter T. Wilkinson and the other by Gretchen Wilkinson to recover for personal injuries. They were passengers in the Hounker car at the time of the accident. The firm of Rogers & McManus are attorneys for these two plaintiffs.

M'PEAKE GETS COUNTY TERM

Sentenced to 30 Days When He Is Unable to Pay Fine For Ring Theft

Lawrence McPeake, aged 17, of Riverside, will have considerable time to reflect on his waywardness as a result of his being sentenced today by City Judge Holland B. Williams to spend 30 days at the Steuben County Jail. McPeake pleaded guilty this morning to a charge of petit larceny and was given his choice of paying a $30 fine or a jail sentence of 30 days. Being without funds he was forced to choose the latter course.

McPeake was picked up yesterday by Detective Raymond Broodker after Mrs. Ollie Welty, of Denison Parkway, had made a complaint that some rings had been stolen from her. McPeake was suspected as he had assisted in moving the Welty family and when questioned the youth admitted his guilt.

LACKAWANNA TO ELECTRIFY

"Eventually But Not Now" Says President Davis of the Railroad

"Eventually but not now" still sums up the situation as to Lackawanna railroad electrification. This was made clear by President Davis himself in denying reports which have been current that the road was about to announce the early electrification of its suburban division between Hoboken and South Orange.

The Lackawanna is persistently studying the subject of electrification, Davis said, as it has been doing for several years. It has made careful observations of all railroad electrification projects as they have been carried out, its engineers having lately finished a survey of the Illinois Central's electric development.

It has of late years, moreover, carried out necessary improvements in such a way as to make electrification, when adopted on its lines, as little conducive to expensive changes in track and equipment as foresight would allow. The last 50 cars purchased for the suburban traffic, for example, require only the installation of motors to make them capable of electrical operation.

While the statement was not made, Davis's remarks tended to confirm the belief, entertained by those who have followed recent developments on the railroad, that when electrical operation is installed it will be, so far as the passenger service is concerned, in the form of one or two car electric trains, with combined passenger and motor cars furnishing the traction, and not through the adoption of heavy-duty electric locomotives, capable of pulling longer trains.

The impression was also gained that when the Hoboken-South Orange division is electrified the same changes will be made in the operation of the Hoboken-Montclair service. This suggests that the work when undertaken will be in three stages, may go farther out the Morris & Essex division than South Orange, since the equivalent fare-distance on that line to the Hoboken-Montclair line runs to Millburn, two stations west of South Orange.

TWO BLAZES DURING NIGHT

O'Brien Plumbing Shop and Home of Dr. H. P. Lyon Are Damaged

Efficient work on the part of Corning Fire Department saved the home of Dr. H. P. Lyon, at 339 East First street in an early morning blaze when the house seemed doomed before the blaze was discovered by members of the family who were awakened by the house being filled with smoke.

The alarm was turned in about 2:30 o'clock this morning by Dr. Lyon himself and when the firemen arrived on the scene clouds of smoke were pouring from the residence. The fire had started in the basement of the former who were fortunate in getting at the source of the fire promptly. The blaze had started in a pile of wooden boxes and had reached to the ceiling joists which were burning briskly. The blaze was extinguished with but slight damage resulting, the most of the damage being due to smoke. Dr. Lyon told the firemen later that he had cleaned out the chimney early in the evening and it is thought that a spark might have caught in the boxes. This was the second early morning alarm.

The first was from Box 46 after Captain Daniel Shinners and the police department had discovered a blaze in the plumbing shop of T. E. O'Brien at 64 West Market street. A gas stove which had been left lighted had set fire to the floor and a space of about two feet square was burned in the floor. Captain Shinners was making a beat on the west end when he noticed the smoke coming out of the transom over the store door.

MAHAFFEY OIL MEN IN CITY

Represent Eight Wholesale Plants and 35 Retail Divisions; Tendered Dinner

About 65 representatives of the wholesale and retail divisions of the Mahaffey Refining Oil Corporation were in Corning yesterday for the annual get-together and general conference of the firm. The men represented eight wholesale plants and 35 retail divisions.

The session started with a business meeting at 10 o'clock yesterday afternoon followed by a banquet held at the Ross & Krowl banquet hall at 6 o'clock. During the dinner music was furnished by an instrumental quartet. Chorus singing was also enjoyed during the dinner following the dinner, Dayton Mahaffey, secretary and treasurer of the corporation presided and introduced the speakers, all of whom were representatives of the Sinclaire Oil Company.

The speakers, all from the New York office were, G. E. French, general manager of lubricating oil sales, Charles Campbell, manager of bulk sales and Hal Dunn, representative for the state of New York. These speakers told of the necessity of educating the motoring public in the use of the proper lubricants for the various makes of cars and also explained the difference in the various grades of gasoline now on the market. Mr. French illustrated his talk with stereopticon slides.

BIG CHIEF TO GIVE ADDRESS

Corning Lions Invited to Elmira to Hear Indian, White Horse Eagle

Corning Lions Club has accepted an invitation from Elmira Lions Club to attend an inter-city meeting to be held in that city in the near future when Big Chief White Horse Eagle of Petaluna, Calif., will give a lecture on Indian lore. The outstanding Indian lecturer will be in this section of the state for several days and it is possible that he will come to Corning on his tour of the country.

This famous Indian is 104 years old and is of the famous Osage tribe of Oklahoma. He was graduated from Yale in 1871. He is a minister of high standing, having preached in Westminster Abbey, England and was baptized in the River Jordan where he in turn baptized 102 persons.

There are only four Indian Chiefs recognized by the government in Washington and Big Chief is chairman of these four. He has known all the presidents from Lincoln to Coolidge and has made several of them honorary members. At Buckingham Palace, Big Chief was a guest of Queen Victoria who made him a Knight of the Garter. He has been around the world three times and has been a lecturer for 65 years.

Big Chief has attained the highest degree in Masonry and besides many other clubs and organizations of which he is a member, is a life member of the Lions club. He was featured in the motion picture play, "The Covered Wagon."

PERSONALS

Two Accidents In One Hour

Sometimes motor car owners feel that they are immune to accidents. They argue that they are capable drivers and they are confident that they can keep themselves out of trouble.

But the daily newspapers are full of accounts of accidents.

A recent issue of the local paper had an account of an accident in which the car was badly damaged and the driver lost his life. That same car had been in another accident only an hour before.

Two accidents in one hour for the same driver is not a common occurrence, but an accident insurance policy can and does protect you in both cases.

Look into this insurance thought now. Consult your agent.

Three-quarters of a century in the one location serving this community has given this agency a wide range of experience and a valuable knowledge of insurance problems. These assets along with the courtesy to our customers makes this the logical agency to help you.
